Unemployed register for NICE project

► All ready to make Cayman look NICE for Christmas

By Christopher Tobutt

More than a thousand unemployed Caymanians and spouses of Caymanians crowded into the Lions Centre in George Town to register for the WORC (Work Opportunities Residency Cayman) NICE (National Community Enhancement) project, which is three weeks' work cleaning roadsides, beaches and carrying out maintenance work in Cayman's parks. It is very important and valuable work, because it means that the Cayman Islands' beaches and roadways and other public spaces will be looking really nice for the peak-time winter tourist season, and beautiful beaches are one of Cayman's most valuable assets. It is the second time this year the project has been run, because for the last two years there has been a two-week summertime session as well. If they are accepted onto the program, the workers are required to work from 7am to 3pm five days a week, and are paid ten dollars an hour for regular workers, and twelve dollars an hour for team-supervisors as well as being provided with lunch and a drink. Lois Kellyman Project Manager for NICE said: "This project will run for three weeks from the 25th of November to the 20th of December. Examples of the kind of work they will be doing are

Caymanian Times launches its new Website

Owner and Entrepreneur, Ralph Lewis, is pleased to announce the Website upgrade of the Caymanian Times. The new website is just another step in the development of Lewis Media as the company seeks to become a major source of regional and local news and education. On March 26, 2013, the first publication of Cayman Islands Employment Weekly, a weekly free non-political publication was launched, that provided local job listings, jobseeker statistics, news, financial and motivational tips for Small Business and Residents. Immediately after the launch the company encountered serious resistance to the new newspaper and Mr. Lewis worked tirelessly to achieve his goal and vision. The publication would see two name changes before the name Cayman Weekly stuck in the hearts and minds of over 8,000 readers and 350 customers. The strategic plan included the upgrade to an international newspaper and in 2016 the Caymanian Times was launched. The newspaper now has over 30,000 readers per week, who pick up the free newspapers or download it from the website. With the Launch of the new website, visitors to ctimes.ky will not only have access to unbiased, independent news, but will also be able post and review online personal classifieds that will also be printed in the Caymanian Times newspaper. Financial discipline has always been the impetus for the development of the company and the financial toolbox will soon be reactivated to provide access to knowledge and financial tools. The Website will also have a link to WORC website, the new Government job portal as well as a new Poll module which limits access to Caymanian Users amongst other control features. We invite residents to visit the website and for the next 6 months they will be eligible to win CI$100 per week after subscribing for our news alerts.

at the Department of Environmental Health in the landfill; or they may be working with dispatch, with garbage collection, with the MRCU; or they may be working with the Department of Agriculture and the Agricultural Society. They may also be working with the NRA and Public Works. They will also be cleaning beach access-ways, making sure they are clear, and doing additional work that the Parks Unit may not get to do to attend to their usual everyday work," she said.

Although Transport isn't provided from people's homes, Ms. Kellyman said that as much as possible was done to try to find people work within their districts, so that they didn't have to travel too far. Ms Kellyman added that when the NICE project was over, all the participants would be encouraged to sign up with WORC, so that they might have an opportunity to find permanent employment.

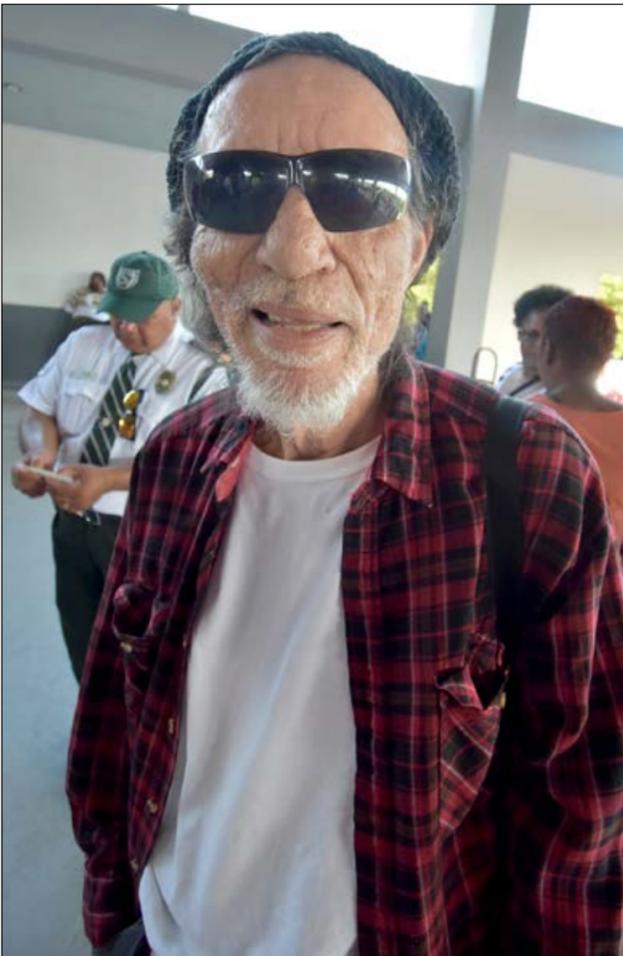

"I'm here today because I'm unemployed. Looking for work for three weeks of work," said Steve, who has signed up with the project several times before. Like many others, while he appreciates the opportunity to earn some extra money in the run-up to Christmas time, he expressed disappointment that there was nothing, really, being offered to follow it up. "I applied at the NRA and the Public Works Department I still can't get any work. No calls, not anything," he said.

Mitchell Ebanks has signed up with the NICE project several times before. "It helps, especially at this time of year around Christmas," he said, but added that he felt things could be made a lot easier if those who had participated before could just fill in a form and drop it off, rather than attend these sessions all over again: "They would have had less people to deal with because the returning people already know what they are going to be teaching," he said.

Cayman Students Hone Rhetorical Skills at 9th Conyers Debate

The ninth Conyers' Inter-Schools Debate Tournament took place on Monday, 4 November at Cayman International School. All local schools were invited to take part with 60 students from seven private and public schools on Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac participating in the event. Students competed in two divisions, Novice and Open over two initial rounds where they debated issues ranging from whether "snitching" is acceptable to the appropriateness of calling out bigoted comments in your friend group to whether or not peer pressure is a positive thing.

The final debate round saw the two top teams from the previous rounds contend over the topical issue of whether the Cayman Islands should significantly increase the promotion of cruise ship tourism, which was also a resolution debated by all debaters, debating both sides.

The winners were as follows:

Open Division Individual Awards:

- Aiden Watler, Cayman Prep and High School, Best Speaker
- Leila Sulliman-Maw, St. Ignatius Catholic School, Second Place Speaker
- Sophie Ellison, Cayman Prep and High School, Third Place Speaker

Open Division Team Awards:

- Aiden Watler and Eva Muspratt, Cayman Prep and High School, Winning Team
- Leila Sulliman-Maw and Kayla Turner, St. Ignatius Catholic School, Runner up Team
- Sadie Finch and Thomas Dickens, Cayman International School, Third Place Team

Novice Division Individual Awards:

- Jack Coleman and Josh Cowell, Cayman International School, Winning Team

Novice Division Team Awards:

- Josh Cowell, Cayman International School, Best Speaker
- Oriela Dzaghgouni, Cayman International School, Second Place Speaker
- Shamara Lewis, John Gray High School, Third Place Speaker

More than 50 judges representing a wide swath of the business and legal community were selected to judge the first rounds, with The Hon. Madam Justice Carter of the Grand Court of the Cayman Islands judging the final debate and offering constructive criticism. A number of local dignitaries including Franz Manderson, Deputy Governor & Head of the Civil Service, were on-hand to witness the debates and were impressed with the level of discourse. Ian Whan Tong, the Tournament Director since the tournament's founding, said "Competitive debating provides fertile ground for all students in the Islands to exercise a 'growth mindset,' in which students embrace challenges, learn from constructive criticism, and are inspired by the success of others - all while having fun. Researching the impact of cruise tourism in our Islands too is a bonus. It is clear that after five consecutive years, the Conyers tournament is having a direct impact in the educational growth of students in the Cayman Islands."

"We continue to be impressed with the students' debating abilities and are proud to be able to offer a platform to allow local students to develop their critical thinking, rhetoric and oratory skills," commented Rhetaig Fulton, Partner at Conyers "We are grateful for the support of the schools, parents and judges for this worthy initiative and we look forward to the next debate." The Conyers' Inter-Schools Debate tournament is the sole high-school competitive debating tournament in the Cayman Islands. The 10th Conyers Inter-Schools Debate is scheduled to be held in February of next year.

The CAACI exhibit at NBAA 2019

Las Vegas played host to the 72nd annual National Business Aviation Association (NBAA) Business Aviation Convention & Exhibition (BACE) tradeshow this year. As the only foreign aircraft register in attendance, the Civil Aviation Authority of the Cayman Islands (CAACI) represented one of the 89 countries exhibiting at the show. The Cayman Islands' delegation, jointly exhibiting with the CAACI, included Island Air (local FBO operator and ground handler) and the Cayman Enterprise City. The Department of Tourism (DOT) and Maples law firm supplied general destination and legal materials pertinent to this target audience.

"The NBAA 2019 tradeshow is a signature event for the CAACI in the promotion of the Cayman Islands Aircraft Registry and the greater Cayman Islands aviation industry. As the largest business/corporate aviation tradeshow globally which seeks to attract upwards of 25,000 attendees and over 1000 exhibitors over 3 days, it is important that the Cayman Islands Aircraft Registry is represented at such an inspiring, interactive and innovative convention", remarked the CAACI Director-General Richard Smith.

In addition to the one million plus square feet of exhibition space, more than 100 aircraft were displayed at a static display of aircraft at the Henderson Executive Airport, and also an indoor display inside the convention center and at various exhibitor booths on the show floor. To review the highlights for this event please visit: <https://www.nbaa.org/news/pr/2019/>

Each year CAACI extends partnership opportunities with the local business community to offer a prize package for a raffle at NBAA and would like to thank this years' sponsors: Cayman Airways Ltd, the Grand Caymanian Resort, the Lobster Pot for supporting the grand prize trip giveaway; and also to Rocky's Diamonds for providing 2 sterling silver 'Grand Cayman map' necklaces.

The Civil Aviation Authority is the statutory body responsible for aviation regulatory (technical/safety and economic) oversight throughout the Cayman Islands and for aircraft registered in the Cayman Islands. The organization is headed by P.H. Richard Smith, the Director-General. The organization is comprised of four regulatory divisions: the Air Safety Regulation division headed by Director Lindsay Cadenhead; the Air Navigation Services Regulation division headed by Director Alastair Robertson; the Finance & Compliance division headed by Director Jane Panton, and the Economic Regulatory and Administration division headed by Deputy Director-General, Nicoela McCoy.

The CAACI has full designation for safety oversight as a UK Overseas Territory. In addition, the Cayman Islands is classified as Category 1 by the USA Federal Aviation Administration under their "International Aviation Safety Assessments" programme that evaluates a country's civil aviation authority's ability to effectively regulate its aviation industry. This rating enables commercial air transport operators registered in Cayman to conduct international air transport operations, i.e, Cayman Airways, Ltd. The requirement for such rating lies with the CAACI being assessed as having technically qualified and appropriate administrative staff to effectively oversee the aviation industry in accordance with established standards and recommended practices of the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO).

Kimpton Seafire Resort + Spa Celebrates Third Anniversary

Three years ago today, the doors opened at Kimpton Seafire Resort + Spa, the first new hotel in Grand Cayman in more than a decade. In this short period of time, Seafire has joined the ranks of hotels rated best in the world, recently taking third place in Conde Nast Traveler Readers' Choice Awards for the Caribbean and voted 36 worldwide.

"We are delighted to celebrate our third anniversary with such positive recognition of our efforts," said Steven Andre, general manager of Kimpton Seafire Resort + Spa. "Three years is a benchmark in the life of a hotel as it's the timeframe in which performance typically stabilises. At Kimpton Seafire, we have gone from strength to strength since opening, competing in the luxury segment and providing an exceptional guest experience."

As Seafire was the first hotel opened by the Kimpton brand outside North America, Andre says he is especially happy with how the resort has been embraced by the Cayman community. "Like all Kimpton hotels, we aspire to be locally loved," said Andre. "Local residents are an important part of our business at the restaurants and spa, and we frequently have staycation rates available. We are delighted that so many people choose Seafire to celebrate special occasions or spend time with their families and friends. Combined with social events and conferences, we have been privileged to host a large percentage of the community at one time or another."

Kimpton Seafire Resort + Spa officially opened on 15 November 2016. Developed by Dart, the 266-room resort on Seven Mile Beach pays tribute to Cayman's natural and cultural heritage in many ways, from the art and artefacts found throughout the hotel to the use of native plants and trees throughout the property.

Three years also happens to be a significant milestone in landscape design, being the time it takes for plants to mature.

"We describe the growth pattern in the first three years as sleep, creep, and then leap," said Dart's senior manager landscape design and horticulture, Whit Connors. "If you look back at photos from the opening, you will see just how much Seafire's natural environment has blossomed and grown."

The Seafire resort, which includes The Residences at Seafire, is planted with over 32,000 plants and trees, the majority of which were propagated in Dart's nursery. The use of native and indigenous plant material creates a distinctive sense of place and has become a hallmark of Dart developments.

"Caymanian trees and shrubs have design and environmental benefits as they are naturally more resilient, and because the buildings are set so far back from the beach, we could get creative, playing with topography and introducing secluded corners for guests' privacy," said Connors.

The economic, social and environmental impact Seafire has had in the past three years embodies Dart's approach to sustainable development, which aims to create places that enrich lives today and for future generations. Dart's growing hotel portfolio, which includes The Ritz-Carlton, Grand Cayman, Comfort Suites and Le Soleil d'Or in Cayman Brac, demonstrates a continued commitment to the Cayman Islands as a destination.

"New hotels not only expand our tourism product, they are proven to raise the profile of the Cayman Islands," said Mark VanDevelde, Dart's chief executive officer. "Seafire is testament to the benefits of a successful hotel, not just to the visitor but to the economy and wider community as well. At Dart, we will continue to support Cayman's tourism industry by investing in our hospitality portfolio, whether making upgrades to existing properties or exploring options for new development."

UK agrees to changes in Constitution

Receiving the much-anticipated confirmation letter from Lord Ahmad of Wimbledon, the UK's Minister of State for the Overseas Territories, last week, Premier Alden McLaughlin has announced that the UK has agreed to a raft of modernisation changes to the Constitution that it's anticipated will give Cayman far greater autonomy over its domestic affairs. The most significant change includes the right for the Cayman Government to be consulted before the UK makes any legislative changes affecting Cayman.

Premier McLaughlin detailed the changes to the Constitution that the Government hoped would be passed in the Legislative Assembly last week.

"...one of the most important bits we believe that is required is to have a provision in the Constitution, which although acknowledging that ultimately the UK does have the power to legislate for us would put some parameters around when that was done and how that was done and what process would have to be followed before it could be done," he explained.

As a result, it is proposed that the Constitution be changed to allow for the Cayman Islands to be notified of proposed Acts of Parliament or Orders in Council when they have an impact on Cayman.

This particular request by Government to change the Constitution came about because of over-reaching steps by the UK Parliament when the Sanctions and Anti-Money Laundering Bill was proceeding through its stages in the UK Parliament, the Premier explained.

"In the end there was success in attaching a certain amendment to that bill, which had the effect of legislating for the Cayman Islands in the area of financial services," the Premier said. "I think we were all justifiably outraged at this over-reach and effectively the UK Parliament intervening in a matter, which is currently the devolved responsibility of this Legislature and the Government."

Premier McLaughlin said this requirement for the UK Government to consult with Cayman first bought Cayman not only time, but the opportunity for broader consultation across Whitehall and Westminster in the UK. This meant Cayman did not have to face the situation again whereby Parliament, "simply on a whim", amended legislation that was progressing through the House which would intervene in areas of domestic policy in the Cayman Islands by legislating for Cayman.

"It is an incredible concession and frankly we would be fools if we were to look this gift horse in the mouth and say this is not something that would be good for the Cayman Islands," he stated.

Further important amendments proposed include making plain that the responsibility for the creation of domestic policy was a matter for Cayman's Government and not for the UK. The Premier said that the UK had also agreed that they would remove the Governor's right to disallow legislation passed by the Cayman Government House, which he termed "a massive concession".

"...for the UK to concede that their appointed Governor would give up the right, which they currently have, to disallow legislation passed by this Parliament is I think a clear indication of the degree of maturity at which the UK is satisfied these Islands currently enjoy in terms of its Government and its Legislature," the Premier stated.

Implications for same-sex marriage legislation

Another significant concession by the UK is that it has agreed to remove the power for the Governor to unilaterally legislate for Cayman, which could have an impact on the current same-sex marriage argument being battled in the Courts. Currently, if Cayman does not act in the way that the UK thinks it ought to act, it could effectively legislate with respect to the definition of marriage, the Premier stated.

"There is implicit, in what the UK has said, that clear warning that if this Legislature does not act, they will. They can do so in two ways: one, the Governor can legislate directly for us under the current constitutional provisions or they can act by Order in Council," he said. "But in this deal we have negotiated, the UK has agreed to remove the power for the Governor to legislate unilaterally for this territory."

Premier McLaughlin said he had always bristled at the prospect of a UK governor having the ability in one fell swoop, by one stroke of the pen, to legislate for his country.

"We would be fools in this House and we ought to be tarred and feathered if we, having negotiated this, allow this opportunity to pass to remedy that situation," he stated.

Other changes proposed include changing the name of the Legislative Assembly to Parliament, the establishment of a public Police Service Commission and increasing the number of Ministers in Government.

In his letter, Lord Ahmad said the next step for Cayman in agreeing the package of amendments to the Constitution was to obtain the broadest possible cross-Party and public support for the reforms, with a referendum one possible solution, he said.

Bishop T.D. Jakes Blesses the Honorable House

The Cayman Islands Legislative Assembly was graced with the presence of none other than international minister and mega church leader extraordinaire, Bishop T.D. Jakes on Wednesday, 13th November.

Bishop Jakes, who was visiting the Cayman Islands on the 'Faith & Family

Cruise,' which sails from November 9th-16th and visits the Bahamas, Jamaica, Key West and the Cayman Islands, blessed the Honorable House with prayers during the morning's proceedings.

Bishop Jakes was flanked by both the Cayman Islands Premier, the Honorable Alden McLaughlin, as well as the Speaker of the House, the Honorable McKeever Bush.

David White – twin brother of George Town Member of the Legislative Assembly Chris White, noted:

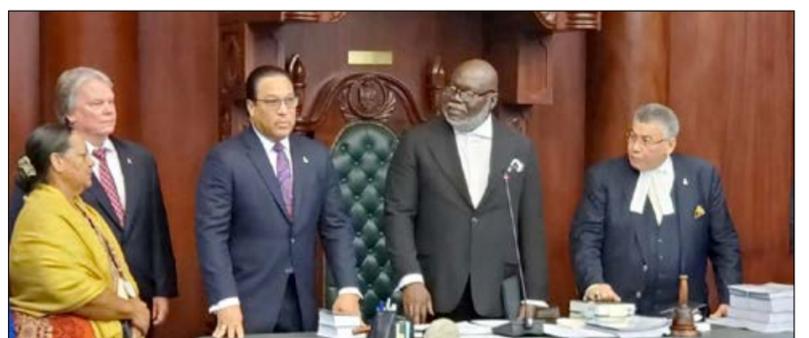

".... we were only introduced to him. When he went up to pray, I took a few pictures but I think the person who knows more would be McKeever Bush as he was with him."

According to the Bishop's Wikipedia page, T. D. Jakes, is a pastor, author and filmmaker.

He is the head pastor of The Potter's House, a non-denominational American mega church. Jakes's church services and evangelistic sermons are broadcast on The Potter's Touch, which airs on Lightsource.com, the Trinity Broadcasting Network, Black Entertainment Television, the Daystar Television Network and The Word Network.

Other aspects of Jakes's ministry include the annual Festival MegaFest which draws more than 300,000 people, the annual women's conference Woman Thou Art Loosed, and gospel music recordings.

He also hosted the T.D. Jakes Show, a nationally syndicated talk show produced by Tegna Media and distributed by Sony Pictures Television, before the show's cancellation in March of 2017.

In Group B action, Triple C travelled to the Dart Field to take on the Under 9 boys and Under 11 boys and girls teams from Cayman International School (CIS) B.

In what was to be the game of the day, the Under 11 boys from CIS 11B outlasted Triple C 4-3.

From the opening whistle, CIS 11B went on the attack and were rewarded in the 3rd minute as Colby Jakubiak put his school in front. Luke Higgs' long-range effort made it 2-0 in the 12th minute with CIS 11B seemingly in complete control.

In the second half, Triple C pulled a goal back in the 39th minute as Tudor Olar scored from the penalty spot. In the 41st minute, Triple C were back on level terms at 2-2 as Oscar Dragten slotted home a loose ball that the CIS goal keeper failed to hold. ## CIMPA Partners with CIIPA and CISHRP to Support Local Charities

The Cayman Islands Marketing Professionals Association (CIMPA) recently joined forces with the Cayman Islands Institute of Professional Accountants (CIIPA) and the Cayman Islands Society of Human Resource Professionals (CISHRP) to host the second annual Charity Speed Matching event.

Designed to match local charities and volunteers with specialised skill sets, 13 charities and over 50 volunteers registered for this year's event which was hosted by the Kimpton Seafire Resort + Spa.

CIMPA Head of Community Hannah Reid says the 2019 event built on the success of last year's Charity Speed Matching.

"The idea behind the initial event was to match marketers with charities in need of their unique skillsets," Ms. Reid says. "After seeing what a positive impact the event had last year, we knew we wanted to make it even bigger and better this year. By partnering with CIIPA and CISHRP, we were able to make even more connections between our professional members and local charities in need of marketing, finance and human resource support."

During the event, charities were paired with potential volunteers in two-minute rounds that mimicked the quick pace of conventional speed dating. The organisations and volunteers were each asked to rank their top five choices and "matched" according to their preferences.

CIIPA Head of Operations and Communications Vanessa Hansen says the association was pleased with the level of involvement from volunteers and charities alike.

"Our members are always keen to get involved in the community, so CIIPA was pleased to take part this year. Because the event brought a variety of charities together, it was a fantastic opportunity for our members to connect with causes they are passionate about," Ms. Hansen says.

CISHRP Board Member Alanna Warwick-Smith says the society was proud to co-host this year's event.

"This event reintroduced civic-mindedness to our organisation by showing our membership that they already have the skills needed to support their community. A lot of valuable connections were made by all organisations and we can't wait to watch this event continue to grow from strength to strength," she says.

Ms. Reid says having an engaged membership is important to each of the professional associations.

"At the end of the day, our members are all part of the Cayman Islands community and volunteering is one way in which we can give back to the place we call home," she says.

About CIMPA

Arrest Warrant Issued for US Investment Banker Charged with Manslaughter in Anguilla

An international arrest warrant has been issued for an American banker who, claiming that he fears for his safety because of public outcry, has refused to return to Anguilla to face the court for killing a hotel worker.

Anguilla's Attorney General Dwight Horsford said 44-year-old Scott Hapgood is now considered a fugitive and faces extradition to the small British Overseas Territory to face the court.

The UBS investment banker is facing a manslaughter charge, accused of killing 27-year-old employee of the luxury Maliouhana Hotel, Kenny Mitchel, during a confrontation while on a family vacation in April this year.

He was to appear in court for a preliminary hearing on Monday, but Horsford said Hapgood's defence team had notified local officials the night before that they had advised their client to not return.

"The letter further stated that this advice rested on concerns for their client's safety and the fairness of the judicial process in Anguilla," Horsford said in a statement released yesterday. "Both concerns are totally groundless."

Governor Tim Foy, in a separate statement, insisted that the island was committed to fairness in the judicial process.

"He has no reason to doubt the fairness of the judicial process. The rule of law and respect for it are paramount in this territory, as in all constituent jurisdictions of the Eastern Caribbean Supreme Court," Foy said.

"Throughout this process, we have kept a respectful silence to enable the court to go about its business — this is how we do things here. We have not and will not engage in public relations shenanigans of the type we have seen — that is not how we do things. Hapgood has the right to fair judicial process and he will receive that."

► Scott Hapgood is refusing to return to Anguilla on the manslaughter charge

But US media has quoted Hapgood's spokesman Jamie Diaferia as saying that "it has become progressively apparent that Scott would not receive a fair trial in Anguilla".

That is a position the island's magistrate has dismissed, describing Hapgood's court absence on Monday as "willful defiance".

The US banker claimed that during the family vacation at the resort, a knife-wielding Mitchel entered the hotel room where he and his two daughters were, and demanded money. A violent struggle ensued and Mitchel ended up dead.

Hapgood was subsequently charged and remanded to prison, but was later released on $74,000 bail by the High Court. He has returned to Anguilla for court appearances on three occasions since being charged.

Positional asphyxiation was initially given as the cause of death for Mitchel, but toxicology results later showed that the hotel worker had high levels of cocaine and alcohol in his bloodstream. 🌐

Former Antigua Regulator Appears in US Court on Fraud Charges Days After Being Extradited

The former chief of Antigua and Barbuda's Financial Services Regulatory Commission (FSRC) Leroy King has made his first court appearance in the United States, days after being extradited from the twin-island nation to face charges for his alleged role in connection with the Stanford International Bank (SIB) US$7 billion investment fraud scheme.

King, 74, was the last remaining defendant in the SIB Ponzi scheme. He had been fighting his extradition since he was charged in June 2009.

He appeared before US Magistrate Judge Dena Hanovice Palermo in Houston, Texas, yesterday.

King was charged along with Allen Stanford and several others. The indictment charges him with one count of conspiracy to commit mail, wire and securities fraud; seven counts of wire fraud, 10 counts of mail fraud, one counts each of conspiracy to obstruct and obstruction of a Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) investigation; and conspiracy to commit money laundering.

It is alleged that King accepted more than US$100,000 in bribes from Stanford in exchange for ignoring the actual value of SIB's assets. He also allegedly assisted Stanford and others in obstructing the SEC's investigation into the bank.

A federal jury found Stanford guilty in June 2012 for his role in orchestrating the 20-year investment fraud scheme in which he misappropriated US$7 billion from SIB to finance his personal businesses. He is serving a 110-year prison sentence.

Five others were also convicted for their roles in the scheme and received sentences ranging from three to 20 years in federal prison. 🌐

Scanners and Spot Checks at Schools Under Consideration in Barbados After Student Is Fatally Stabbed

The Ministry of Education in Barbados is looking at introducing hand held scanners and random spot checks at a secondary school where a 16-year-old student was stabbed to death by a 15-year-old on the compound last week. And other schools could also be in line for those measures.

The disclosure was made by Minister of Education Santia Bradshaw during a press conference at the Erdiston Teachers' Training College where teachers from the Frederick Smith Secondary School received counselling throughout the day.

Some of the students are scheduled to return to the school, on the country's West Coast, from tomorrow. Others return the following day, and the remainder next Monday.

"One of the concerns that have been expressed [by teachers] is a major challenge in relation to the school plants in terms of security issues. We have looked at not metal detectors in the strict sense of the word in terms of framed metal detectors, but we are exploring the hand detectors as an option particularly for the return to school on Thursday," Minister Bradshaw said.

"We want to ensure that the plant is safe at this stage. While this tragedy has happened, I can give no assurances to the country that students may not have weapons on them next week. Therefore, it is important persons who have to work in the environment as well as students who are not engaged in such activities in terms of possession of weapons, feel comfortable and their parents must feel comfortable coming back to the Frederick Smith School."

The Education Minister further indicated that the hand held scanners could be introduced at other schools which have been experiencing challenges with deviant behaviour.

She said the Boards of Management as well as the principals of these schools were reviewing the issue to determine if the scanners would be required. However, Bradshaw cautioned that it was not a case of "one fit for all".

"...There are some schools that have greater challenges than others and as a precautionary measure, I think that time has now come where we will have to consider spot checks and random searches as well as ensuring that at least the points of entry are properly secured to make sure that the limit - not that we can in any way ever prevent these types of incidents from happening because as we discussed with the police today, anything can become a weapon.

"There is nothing we can do to completely eliminate the possibility of any violent act taking place but there are some precautions that we can take across the system to try to reduce the number of incidences like [the one at Frederick Smith]," she said.

She added that the Ministry owed it "to all concerned" to take the necessary steps to weed out deviant behaviour.

And she said the Royal Barbados Police Force would be working with the Ministry to address the issues affecting not just Frederick Smith Secondary but several other schools in relation to frequent patrols, possession of weapons by students and a general police presence.

Bradshaw said this would send "the very strong message" that violence would not be tolerated in any form at educational institutions. She also warned parents that their failure to work with the Ministry and schools was not in the best interest of their children, and stressed that cooperation from all stakeholders was needed to arrest violence.

"Parents also must see themselves as equal stakeholders in this exercise. We need to have a situation in this country where there is greater vigilance of our students. We have to ensure that we have greater participation in the Parent/Teacher Associations and when the principals and others call parents to find out what is happening with students, I am asking you as parents to ensure that you attend the institution to find out what is going on to be able to find solutions to any problems the students may be encountering," the Minister implored.

Bradshaw said it was the goal of the Ministry of Education to "do all within our power to ensure that an incident of this nature does not recur again in the history of this country". 🌐

MONTserrat HEADS TO THE POLLS (WITH AN OUTCOME TOO CLOSE TO CALL)

There's an intensity surrounding Montserrat's 2019 election that rivals similar events in the island's recent history.

Voters in the British Overseas Territory go to the polls on Monday November 18th.

That there are a record 35 candidates including 10 independents vying for the nine parliamentary seats in an island with a population of around 4,600 speaks volumes about the state of the body politic.

The ruling People's Democratic Movement (PDM) is defending a slim 5-4 majority reduced from a convincing 7-2 victory margin secured in its first electoral run in 2014.

Now, 28 candidates from three parties along with 10 independents are snapping at PDM's heels.

In a depressed UK-aid-dependent economy where the incumbent PDM government has a tenuous one-seat majority, its opponents think power is theirs for the taking.

Fractures within the government could be responsible for the large number of candidates in the elections, especially the unusually high turnout of independents.

The PDM is being targeted, in part for questions about its stewardship over the past five years as it seeks a second term, as well as weak spots seen in its internal structure.

The government is led administratively, albeit in its current pre-election lame-duck mode, by Premier Donaldson Romeo.

Its challengers see it as a sitting duck because while Romeo might still be de facto premier, in the political leadership where the real power lies especially at election time, it's Minister for Communications, Works, Labour and Energy, Paul Lewis who is now in the driver's seat.

The ruling PDM has had a roller-coaster ride in government, but that has been more pronounced in its internal upheavals.

Within a year of a shock and overwhelming victory over the then-ruling Movement for Change and Prosperity (MCAP) led by Reuben Meade (who has since retired - rather dramatically and unexpectedly - after a short stint as opposition leader), rising PDM star and second-highest vote-getter in the 2014 polls, Dr Ingrid Buffonge, had quit the party and crossed the floor.

That reduced the PDM's stomping 7-2 majority over MCAP in parliament to 6-3.

It was further whittled down to hang by a tenuous 5-4 thread when Greg 'Saga' Willock, parliamentary secretary assigned to the Ministry of Youth and Sports, walked out in October last year.

The ruling PDM is fielding seven candidates for the nine seats at stake.

Premier Romeo is not one of them, having lost a last-minute pre-election internal leadership vote, the timing of which the ruling party has struggled to explain.

The crushing finality of that vote (6 to 2) with only Deputy Premier Delmaude Ryan voting for him along with

Mr Romeo's personal vote - and coming as it did just shortly after he'd announced the election date just a day before the deadline - reverberated into the ensuing election campaign.

Mr Romeo is running as an independent.

Ironically, Premier Romeo survived a no-confidence motion triggered by Dr Buffonge last year. One year later, almost to the day, he could not stave off a damning verdict by his parliamentary colleagues who had backed him then.

Another noteworthy absence from the PDM line-up is former caucus member and until recently Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Shirley Osborne.

The sister of PDM's David Osborne (both offspring of late chief minister John Osborne), she is also running as an independent.

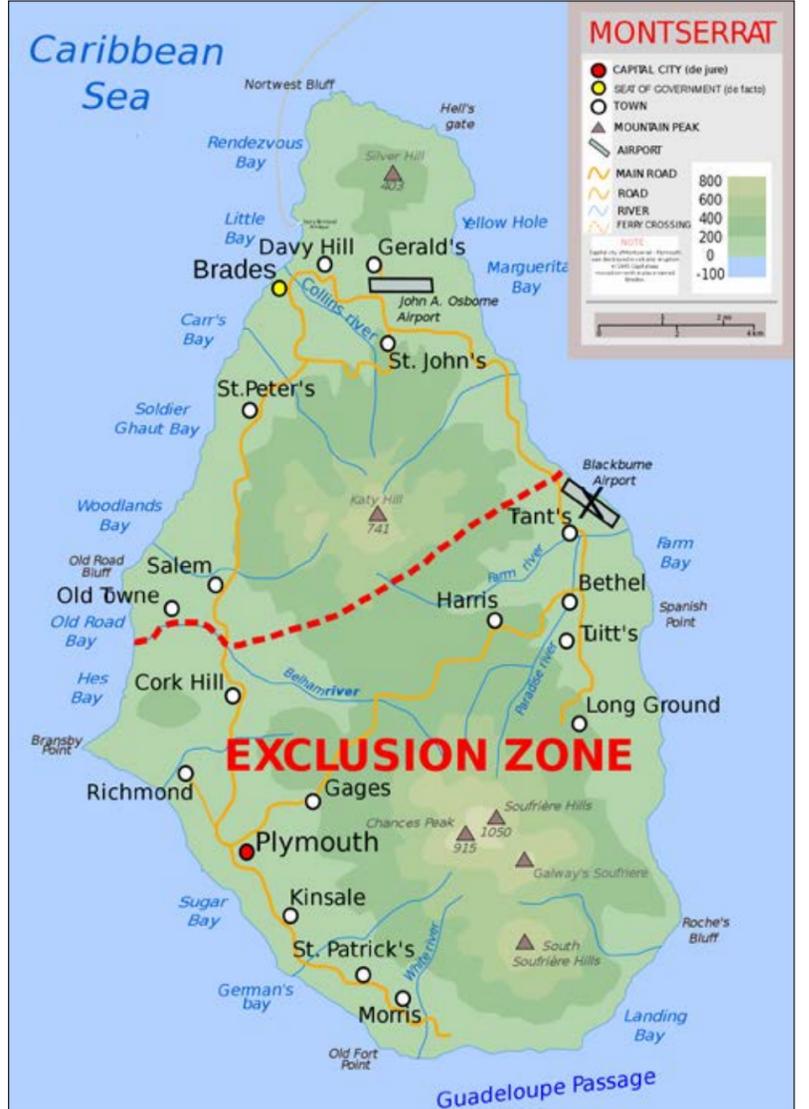

But what the party in power is aggressively pushing to hold onto to its base, win back doubters and win over converts, is the opportunistically (for it) timed announcement of a long-awaited major capital project funding injection by the British government.

Recently announced, it amounts to $EC 200 million and has become a pivotal campaign issue across the board.

In fact, PDM has sought to capitalise on it with a rather clumsy advertisement purporting to suggest that the British government might have 'rewarded' PDM with the allocation of the funds rather than MCAP.

That money is intended for a series of vital long-overdue, much-debated, excessively-consulted projects intended to set Montserrat on a path to recovery since the economic and social dislocation caused by the eruption of the island's Soufriere Hills volcano between 1995 and 2010.

improvement and airport upgrades are included in the British funds to be disbursed over several years.

These projects have been subjected to a series of delays over the past several years spanning several British and local governments.

This will be the eighth Montserrat government since the volcano erupted.

It's an impressive aid commitment by any stretch of the imagination for which the ruling party - now under Paul Lewis - is keen to take political credit for, and which its former leader Romeo, now an independent candidate, is competing to claim.

Political polling is not widely prominent in Montserrat - or necessary for that matter. In a population of just over 4,600 and voter base of around 3,000, voter targeting, while not following the rigid science required in larger communities and countries, nevertheless requires particular local knowledge.

This revolves around three critical Fs; family, friends and the foreigners vote.

Montserrat has a large non-national population, especially from the Caricom member states who will have acquired voting rights as Commonwealth citizens under the islands 2010 Constitution.

The Montserrat Statistics Department records in a 2018 study that almost half of the resident population were non-nationals at around 45%.

Of that, a significant number are adults from Commonwealth member countries who would have met the voter qualification requirements, many having resided on the island for well over 10 years.

Commonwealth citizens require a three-year residency.

With over half the pre-volcano indigenous population displaced to the diaspora and subsequently disenfranchised since the eruption, the non-national vote has become an influential and much sought-after bloc.

It's said to have had a major role in favour of the PDM in the 2014 election, largely through the campaigning efforts of its former political leader Romeo.

Whether PDM can hold on to that bloc, fight off its opponents and hold on to power is the $EC 200 million question in next Monday's election, November 18th.

The party is fielding only seven candidates while MCAP which it unseated in 2014 is the only party with a full slate of nine.

The debut of the new Montserrat United Labour Party (MULP) with two former MCAP stalwarts at the helm, adds another element to the possibilities of outcomes for 2019.

When one considers the 10 independent candidates with some very strong potential vote-getters among them, next Monday's poll is all to play for and just about anyone's call.

A large voter turnout is anticipated from an electorate expected to be around 3,000 in the island's post-volcano single-constituency, nine votes-per-person system.

Given the number of candidates, 35 in all, there is much talk about the likelihood of a coalition.

While the outcome of the 2014 election was unexpected, Monday's 2019 polls may very well yield some major surprises.

There are 35 candidates, 10 of whom are independents, vying for nine seats. Montserrat is a one-constituency system since the volcano crisis. Each voter can cast ballots for all nine candidates. There are 3,855 registered voters out of a population of 4,696.
