Red Cross finally reopens

This week the Cayman Islands Red Cross Hurricane Shelter and HQ building has finally reopened after a much-needed renovation process that has taken two years to complete. Headed by Red Cross Director Jondo Obi, the Cayman Islands Red Cross is manned by a team of staff and volunteers, who do an incredible job running the Thrift Shop, giving first aid and basic water rescue training, providing sexual health and free HIV screenings, and giving vital child protection education. They give first aid assistance at a whole host of events across the islands and in the case of an emergency event, they offer education and advice about how to prepare for an emergency as well as what to do if one occurs. They are, in fact, one of the most important resources Cayman has when it comes to dealing with a wide range of urgent needs within the community. So, we encourage everyone to take a look in your closets, bag up unused clean items and send them to the Red Cross. Pay a visit to their Thrift Shop and purchase a book or an item of clothing, and when you see a Red Cross volunteer collecting for any number of worthy causes they support, dig deep into your wallet and make sure you give some love to this incredibly important organisation. If you want to find out more about volunteering, contact them at vrm@redcross.org.ky or call (345) 949-6785 ext. 1 or (345) 925-2251.

Cayman Airways Express saves the day

Golson arriving in Grand Cayman at 3.50pm.

The Cayman Airways Boeing 737-300 aircraft arrived 20 minutes early and departed for Grand Cayman ahead of schedule. Passengers were delighted as they were expected to arrive at 3.30pm. Unfortunately, this was not to be. As the George Town runway came into sight the captain advised passengers that he was placed in a holding pattern as the Owen Roberts Airport had just been closed.

The plane circled for 20 minutes off the George Town coast before eventually flying to Cayman Brac to await the re-opening of the Airport. Passengers stayed on the plane at the Charles Kirkconnell International Airport for an hour before being advised that the flight was being terminated in Cayman Brac and all passengers would have to disembark and be processed by customs.

By then due to the efficiency of Social Media and local news agencies, the news of partial damage to a temporary asphalt ramp causing the airport to be closed had circulated to all passengers.

Passengers were professionally accommodated in the Brac and the Cayman Airways staff advised that the airport had been reopened with a re-declared distance, allowing limited flight operations to resume. Plans had been made for the 2 Cayman Airways Express Saabs to travel to the Brac to collect 68 passengers with the remainder returning the next morning on the jet at 7am.

The arrival of the Saab's and return flights were flawless and the first group of 34 arrived in Grand Cayman at 9.30pm bringing a 6-hour journey to a safe and happy ending with applause from all passengers.

Contingency Plan

A contingency plan is a course of action designed to help an organization

respond effectively to a significant future event or situation that may or may not happen.

A contingency plan is sometimes referred to as "Plan B," because it can be also used as an alternative for action if expected results fail to materialize. Contingency planning is a component of business continuity, disaster recovery and risk management.

The Board of Directors for Cayman Airways may not have foreseen the partial damage to the runway on February 10, 2020, but we are sure that the purchase of the two Saab's were an integral part of their contingency planning.

We thank our National Airline and particularly the Aircraft Crews for the excellent service and this is another reason why we choose to fly on our National Airline, Cayman Airways. 🇰🇾

Beacon Farms: growing crops, ideas, and new lives

The Bridge Foundation, a kind of half-way-house in West Bay for people who have been struggling with substance abuse. The Foundation gives people the opportunity to participate in a 12-step, 6-month programme, similar to Alcoholics Anonymous. After operating for several years, Executive Director Bud Volinsky was concerned that too many people who had completed the program were returning to their old lifestyle: "In the end we nailed it to being an issue of employment," he said. It is OK to go through a programme, but the trouble is, many people still find it hard to find a job, especially if they have a criminal record. For those who come to Beacon Farms, the rate of falling-back has decreased by 90 percent, Mr. Volinsky said.

That is where the 34 acres of land, now known as Beacon Farms comes in.

A couple of years ago, with the help of a kind benefactor, the Foundation was able to buy the overgrown land, and transform it. It is already giving real employment to a dozen people. They are mostly growing tobacco at the moment, and they have their own on-island cigar-rolling factory, all proceeds going back to the Foundation, and plans to market the brand all over the world. They are also working on developing their coconut oil factory, which takes in locally-grown coconuts, producing oil and coconut flour, too. The farm also grows pineapples, bananas mangos sweetsop, soursop, avocado, limes and jackfruit.

It's about growing new ideas which act like a beacon for other farms. One of those ideas is a static-aeration composting system, where green waste, both from the farm, but also from landscaping companies is chipped and composted down with help from air which is piped into the heap from pipes running through the concrete base. The reactions inside the heap cause it to reach such a high temperature that it becomes sterile and pathogen-free. The result, in just over two weeks, is high-grade organic compost that will be bagged and sold. But there are many other ideas growing there too.

It is also about growing and developing talent. There are many different departments at the farm, ranging from heavy equipment to construction, to plant propagation and cultivation, and many of the people who go there already have some skills to offer, which are nurtured and cultivated. It isn't about short-term, it all about long-term sustainability, with benefits not only for local farming, but for Cayman society.

Robert Ramoon, who works in plant propagation said: "God is the creator. I want to be next to the creator, and see the plants start from seed and grow. I love nature. I love plants and I love growing things. We try not to use any chemical that is not organic. It has to be organic."

"My recovery depends on me. It's what I do at the end of the day. But having a stable job in a place like this, where there are other people like me who are putting their life back together, and saying: "You know what? I've had enough (of the old way of life). It makes me feel good." 🌱

► The thrift shop

► The Red Cross Building

Reopening of Red Cross building

The Red Cross was celebrating the formal opening its refurbished and renovated new building, opposite the Cricket Field in George Town, which acts as headquarters, a hurricane shelter, and a thrift shop, on Wednesday 12 February.

Red Cross Director Jondo Obi outlined some of the Red Cross's international principles, during a short ceremony outside the building which has stood there for more than 30 years, and was in urgent need of extensive renovation. "Those principles are, Humanity, impartiality, Neutrality, Independence, Voluntary Service, Unity, and Universality," she said. "We are worldwide, and we have a network of 192 national Red Crosses. Our mission is always to protect life and health, while preserving human dignity. We are neutral, so we do not take sides in conflicts, or in politics. We are very unique, because under international law, the Geneva Conventions, we have a special, auxiliary status with all our respective governments. Some see this as just a building, but for us, we see this as the embodiment of community support," she added.

The Red Cross was begun in 1961 by National Hero, Ms Ethel Cook Boddan, "There were certain disasters in the region, and she thought it would be a good idea, since she came from the UK," Ms Obi said. In 1973 the first Red Cross Committee was begun. The Chairman was the late John Gray, and the secretary was Ms. Janilee Clifford, who is here with us today," she said.

Red Cross Chairman Douglas Moffatt said: "After 30 years of service to Cayman, our building was in dire need of renovation and all-round improvement. We needed to bring it in line with current building codes, and we didn't have adequate facilities to provide what we thought was a safe and humane refuge, during the Hurricane season, and most notably it was not accessible to persons with disabilities."

Plans for renovation began in 2015, and work started in 2017. It was a big project, and would not have been possible without many people stepping up to the plate and helping, he said, not only by making donations, but also by donations of services; such as building and architectural services. There was a CI 600,000 budget for the renovations, in the end, he said, some of which was raised by the Shelter from the Storm campaign, run by the Red Cross.

Hon Tara Rivers said: "this is a community effort, and we celebrate the many contributions through cash or kind. The shelter is now a flagship emergency relief centre for the local area, and certainly the centre will provide the community with benefit for many years to come. These upgrades are made possible in part, due to the funding provided by the Government, and I thank Minister McTaggart for being here as well, representing the Government through the Ministry of Financial Services and Home Affairs."

Inside the lovely new interior houses the thrift shop, which not only raises funds for the Red Cross but also provides people with a means of buying nice clothes, shoes and toys that they might otherwise find difficult to budget for: Upstairs is a hurricane shelter area, and was the scene of lots of photo-ops as well as refreshments. 🌐

National Security Council Discusses Disaster Management Following Earthquake

At a special meeting of the National Security Council on Tuesday 4 February, chaired by HE The Governor, Cayman's capability to deal with sudden onset disasters was discussed, following the earthquake that struck the territory on 28 January.

The Council was briefed by Danielle Coleman, the Director of Hazard Management Cayman Islands (HMCI), on the Government's response to the earthquake and subsequent tsunami warning. The problem of traffic congestion following the event was highlighted as well as the challenges of providing effective, early emergency notifications to the public.

The Council endorsed the work that has been undertaken by HMCI in collaboration with the Governor's Office, the Department of Public Safety Communications, the ICTA and other key agencies to implement Phase II of the National Emergency Notification System (NENS).

After a fire at the SOL fuel storage facility in July 2017 and the subsequent alert of a potential tsunami threat following an earthquake north of Honduras in January 2018, it was apparent that the mechanisms relied upon historically to alert the public, like press releases, radio and TV advisories were not adequate in sudden onset situations. Shortly thereafter, swift action was taken by the Government to make provisions in the Disaster Preparedness and Hazard Management Law (2019 Revision) for the establishment of the National Emergency Notification System (NENS) and funding was committed for the implementation of Phase I.

With the Phase I technology already in place, HMCI successfully interrupted all radio station broadcasts to alert the public to the earthquake and to advise that hazardous tsunami waves were possible for the Cayman Islands within two minutes of receiving the official Pacific Tsunami Warning Centre notification. The message also included instructions to safeguard the public.

Phase II will broaden the number of communication channels available to disseminate emergency messages in order to reach the maximum number of individuals at once. This involves investment in a centralised message distribution system including the creation of a new mobile alert application. Once complete, the public will be able to download the app free of charge and receive real time emergency notifications directly to their phones. Phase II will also enable simultaneous warning messages to be delivered via SMS, emails and social media. The project is due to be implemented in the next three months.

The Council also agreed further work to a major step-up in our public information programme run by HMCI. Specifically this work will be aimed at providing additional advice to the public on how to prepare for and react to earthquakes and tsunami warnings.

HMCI has expanded the existing school's hazard awareness program to include teachers and principals so they are fully aware of the appropriate response and safety procedures. There has been a dramatic increase in requests from both the private and public sector entities for awareness sessions. A regional tsunami exercise is scheduled for March, which will test both the national mechanism and provide opportunities for broad community participation.

Lessons learned from both the earthquake on 28 January, the upcoming tsunami exercise and the process of debriefing the clusters with operational responsibilities in the National

► HE Governor Martyn Roper

Emergency Operations Centre will provide opportunities to identify gaps and strengthen the overall response mechanism. Finally, HMCI will shortly embark on a campaign with Government Information Services to provide visual materials such as wall posters with clear instructions on what to do before, during and after earthquakes and tsunamis. These will be posted on classroom walls and in key locations such as hospitals and civic centres.

Cayman features on HGTV's Beachfront Bargain Hunt

The couple, who are from Morgantown, West Virginia but currently live in Laughlintown Pennsylvania, say they were thrilled to finally be able to purchase a condo on Grand Cayman.

Matt, an audiologist, visits Cayman frequently, working with Dr Ecker at his Hearing and Balance department of ENT in Cayman. When he's at home in the States he works at his own business, Advanced Hearing Center, of which he has three locations in Pennsylvania. His wife, Leigh Ann helps with advertising for the business and the couple also own and operate Diamond Theatre of Ligonier, for which Leigh Ann is heavily involved in every aspect of the productions that they put on, as are their children, Lanigan, 15, Arison, 12, and Mariana, 7.

The couple said they had wanted to live on Grand Cayman for over 20 years.

"My wife would've been happy living under a tree on the beach but I thought a condo might be better!" Matt confirmed. "Now that I am working on island, it was feasible and was a smarter move to have a place to call home when traveling back and forth."

He said that they had been to several Caribbean destinations but fell in love with Grand Cayman and the people.

"You cannot find nicer, more welcoming people than the ones on Grand Cayman," he stated.

The couple said when visiting Cayman, they most often stayed at the Comfort Suites, which they particularly love, especially the food. The time eventually came, however, when they wanted to put down more solid roots in Cayman, so they found a real estate agent and set to work.

"We were lucky enough to find an amazing realtor, Caroline Thorburn, who works for Sotheby's and has helped us look for quite a while," Leigh Ann advised. "She showed us properties a year ago, but the time wasn't right for us. Luckily, she was patient, very patient. She wrote to me one day and asked if we wanted to be in TV! I laughed and then realised she was serious. From there we had to be interviewed over the phone by a production company and when we passed that interview, we had to do a video chat with us and the kids. Surprisingly, they liked us!"

The couple said they liked all the properties that they viewed, but their number one priority was the beach.

"I personally didn't care how big the place would be or how fancy, as long as it was beachfront, that's all that mattered," Leigh Ann said. "Then there's budget... money always makes the final decision!"

The couple ended up buying a condo because they said they had wanted to forever. It also made sense having a base for Matt when he comes to work in Cayman and makes a great place for a vacation home for the family. The condo will be rented out when the family aren't there, they advised.

Leigh Ann said they very much enjoyed appearing on the show.

"It was phenomenal!" she said. "So much fun! The production crew was amazing! They were fast, efficient, and incredibly nice. The kids enjoyed the experience as well. I think they liked swimming with the cameras on their mask the most, I'm scared to see what they filmed underwater! It was loads of fun working with our realtor, Caroline as well! She would attempt an American accent and I would butcher an English accent! There were many laughs on set!"

6 Reasons Why Valentine's Day is Meaningful to the Hospitality Industry

Valentine's Day is the ultimate day of love and the perfect opportunity to show your appreciation for those who mean the most to you. And, it is highly probable that those special plans include hospitality businesses through delicious cocktails or mocktails, exquisite dinners, relaxing spa treatments, or full-on weekend staycations. Here's what Valentine's Day means to the hospitality industry:

Increased Revenue Potential

Did you know that Valentine's Day is one of the biggest days of the year for both the hospitality and travel and tourism industry? It is a holiday with enormous potential for businesses. This day is a great opportunity to attract new guests to your hotel, spa, or restaurant.

There isn't any better time to introduce guests to special offers and provide them with romantic, fun, unforgettable, instagramable experiences.

Showcase Uniqueness

Individuals are always looking for the next best thing. They are seeking new special events and unique experiences. For the amount of money, they will spend on Valentine's Day, they expect not only good food, but also a good experience and great ambiance. How about lavish ice cream sundaes or an 'awaken your senses' suite package?

Show Some Love to Repeat Visitors

When customers visit your hotel or restaurant frequently, it shows that they like what the venue has to offer. For Valentine's Day, we recommend offering your guests something extraordinary and unexpected to showcase how versatile and unique your business is during the holidays. Oh, and Valentine's Day cards aren't just for partners or classroom card exchanges. A small handwritten note on the guest room desk or on the dining table is an unexpected way to celebrate. These small and colorful greetings offer a fun and playful way to thank your guests for their continued patronage and wish them the best on Valentine's Day.

Opportunity to Be Creative

Although February may be the shortest month of the year, it is one of the months with the greatest potential. Love may be in the air on Valentine's Day, but so should your creativity! It's a time to showcase your creativity and use your skill, imagination, and knowledge to beat the competition! Offer anti-Valentine options too. "No Man Manicures", or "Love on the Rocks" pomegranate raspberry vodka cocktails are fun accompaniments.

Extended Holiday Hours

Make sure you also update your local listings to match your holiday hours! And, since the most romantic restaurants are typically booked far in advance, maybe consider extending Valentine prix fixe menus into the weekend - ensuring more reservation slots and the chance for guests to surprise their special someone.

Interrogating the concepts of Integrity and Ethics

Confucius - 'To see what is right, and not to do it, is want of courage or of principle.'

On 18 and 19 October 2018, under its Education for Justice (E4J) initiative, the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) organized an Expert Workshop for university lecturers aimed at enhancing their capacity to teach integrity and ethics. The Expert Workshop was held at the Universidad del Rosario, hosted and co-organized by the University's Centre for Ethics and Citizenship.

Having recently completed the development of the Education for Justice (E4J) University Modules on Integrity and Ethics, the UNODC has rolled them out and is engaging as many universities and academics as possible to strengthen integrity and ethics education worldwide.

I had the privilege of attending this event. The teaching of ethics and integrity must be an important component of education itself, and in my view, especially at the tertiary levels.

The University Modules on Integrity and Ethics developed by the experts chosen by the UNODC is a treasure trove of scholarly and practical information on the subject. They cover such areas as ethics and universal values, ethics and society, ethical leadership, ethics, diversity and pluralism, challenges to ethical living, strategies for ethical action, behavioural ethics, gender dimensions of ethics, media integrity and ethics, professional ethics and integrity, ethics and law.

This article discusses briefly the concepts of ethics and integrity. The current preference is towards a shift from 'corruption' studies, to a widening and broadening of the focus to examining integrity and ethics. It is believed that this more 'comprehensive perspective' allows us to move beyond discussions about the difference between right and wrong, in order to focus on relationships and behaviour as well.

Derived from the Greek word ethos, ethics is that branch of philosophy that covers systems of moral principles essentially seeking to answer the question: 'How should we live our lives?'

Considerations of right and wrong must have weighed heavily on the minds of our specie from the most primeval times, however, in the western tradition, the formal study of ethics began with the Greek philosopher, Socrates, who saw morality as a kind of self-discovery to know what is right. Others after him such as Plato, taught character based ethics emphasizing such qualities as courage, temperance, justice and prudence.

Whereas the term integrity is used in various contexts, from the perspective of philosophy, it involves considerations of the ethical and the moral dimensions of our lives. In fact, integrity treats, firstly, with how we see and relate to ourselves, and, secondly, the moral constraints that we place on our behaviours with each other.

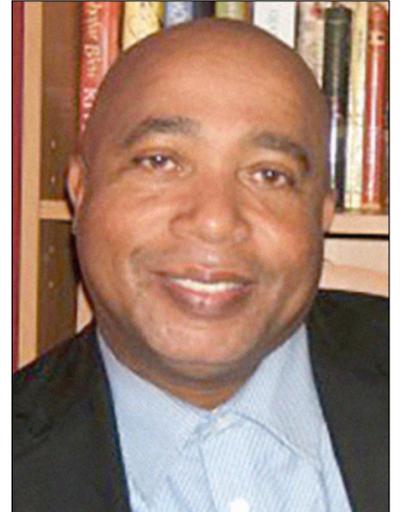

The following is a quote from UNODC's module 'Introduction and Conceptual Framework':

'The concept of integrity has been derived from the Latin "integritas" (wholeness). It is defined as consistency between beliefs, decisions and actions, and continued adherence to values and principles. When someone is described as a person of integrity, the suggestion is that such a person is not corruptible as a result of the "wholeness" and "connectedness" of the values and principles that such a person subscribes to.

'Integrity is often used in conjunction with ethics, suggesting that the values and principles that are adhered to should be ethical values. Some of the values that are often mentioned in this regard are honesty, openness, accountability and trustworthiness. Organizational integrity refers to the ability of individual organizations to develop and implement an integrity management framework, and for employees to act in accordance with the values of the organization.'

The concept of ethics always comes back to the question of - how ought we to live? What is right conduct? How do we 'know' what is right conduct? How can we be sure that ethical values such as trustworthiness, responsibility, respect, compassion, fairness, honesty, integrity, transparency, accountability, stewardship and excellence are key universal values that are worth promoting?

With the rise of China as the world's second largest economy, and the international, political and cultural influence that comes with this, ethicists have become particularly interested in Confucianism. Confucius was a famous Chinese thinker and social philosopher whose teachings have deeply influenced East Asia for centuries. He lived approximately between 551 and 479 BC and was a founder of the Ru School of Chinese thought. He is credited with such quotations as 'He who will not economize, will have to agonize', 'I hear and I forget, I see and I remember, I do and I understand', 'It does not matter how slowly you go, so long as you do not stop', and 'To see what is right, and not to do it, is want of courage or of principle.'

As an ethical and philosophical teaching, the main ethical principle of Confucianism is humanism- the belief that human beings can be taught good qualities, how to respect each other and how good engage in respectful, yet meaningful communication. A fundamental teaching is that organizations, economics, and societies are built on relationships and that the blueprint for fostering trusting healthy is taking seriously the Golden Rule, demonstrating humanity towards others, and seeking the good of others over our own interests.' Everyone, no matter the status is worthy of our respect and should be treated as we would want to be treated.

As the module points out, he also considered ethics to mean questions of how we ought to live, what goes into a worthwhile life, how to weigh duties toward family versus duties toward strangers and whether human nature is predisposed to be morally good or bad. He even considers how one ought to relate to the non-human world, the extent to which one ought to become involved in reforming the larger social and political structures of one's society, and how one ought to conduct oneself when in a position of influence or power.

Clearly, discussions about integrity and ethics address the fundamental distinction between right and wrong. It also considers how we might best arrive at this distinction. As pointed out by the module, arriving at decision is much more difficult than deciding whether we prefer one type of food to another, or whether the answer to a simple mathematical equation is right or wrong.

Ethical theories were developed to help us navigate what are sometimes challenging decisions of a moral nature. We examine a few of these in the next article. 🌐

9 Benefits of Strength Training

There used to be a time when very few adults included strength training in their fitness routine. It was thought of as extreme, unnecessary and even dangerous.

Strength training is when resistance is used to challenge your muscles in order to gain strength and endurance. It can be performed with traditional weights, exercise bands, medicine balls, cable machines, sandbags, kettle bells or even just using your own body weight.

Times have certainly changed as a multitude of strength training benefits were proven by experts, including:

- Strength and muscle tone
- Cardiovascular capacity
- Speed, Agility and Flexibility
- Resistance to injury and disease

If that's not enough to convince you to include regular strength training in your fitness routine, then read on for 9 Benefits of Strength Training...

1. Strength Training Builds Muscles: Don't worry, ladies. This does NOT mean that you're going to 'bulk up' or look too masculine. What will happen is that your arms, tummy and legs will become tighter, leaner and more defined.

2. Strength Training Burns Fat: When it comes to losing size, all that you want to see disappear is fat, not muscle. Strength training ensures that you maintain and grow those muscles and only lose fat.

3. Strength Training Builds Strong Bones: The older we get, the more important our bone density is. A good strength training program is one of your best defenses against osteoporosis.

4. Strength Training Alleviates Anxiety, Stress and Depression: Sure, there are plenty of pills out there that claim to give these benefits, but you and I both know that strength training is more wholesome and effective way. And besides, who really wants pharmaceutical side effects?

5. Strength Training Promotes Better Sleep: Here's another pill you can stop taking once you start strength training. Study after study have proven that strength training improves sleep.

► Ernest Ebanks

6. Strength Training Can Relieve Chronic Back Pain: If you are one of the millions across the globe who suffer from back pain then you'll love the benefit of reduced pain.

7. Strength Training Contributes to Insulin Sensitivity: Today diabetes is a huge threat. Minimize your risk by improving insulin sensitivity through regular, challenging strength training.

8. Strength Training Improves Good to Bad Cholesterol Ratio: Here is yet another pill that you could potentially stop taking while on a strength training routine. Blood pressure and heart health are of utmost concern, so why not give yourself the advantage of a strength training routine?

9. Strength Training Raises Metabolism: This helps to reduce body fat and to keep that body fat off, even on the days that you aren't able to exercise. Pretty awesome, right?

A solid strength training routine will tone your legs, lift your buns, strengthen your core, and will result in inches and pounds lost.

If you're ready to begin your body transformation then feel free to reach out to me.

Call Ernest at Body Shapers Fitness 325-8696 or email bodyshaperscaymen@gmail.com and I'll will get you started on the exercise program that will reshape your body once and for all! 🌐

ENHANCING DIGESTION

On a daily basis, enzymes perform countless functions in your body to keep you healthy, alive and thriving abundantly. Of the myriad of functions they are created to carry out, breaking down food for energy is the key. More specifically today, I am referring to PROTEOLYTIC ENZYMES. Their key role is to breakdown and digest proteins. These enzymes are produced in your stomach and pancreas. They are also essential for blood clotting, immune function and protein recycling, cell division. Interestingly, like humans plants also depend on this specific enzyme for its health and defense mechanisms against pests like pests.

Our bodies produce 3 main types of this enzyme- pepsin, trypsin, and chymotrypsin. When we have our meals these go to work on the protein contents. As they work they break the proteins into smaller fragments called amino acids. It's in this from that they are properly absorbed and digested. If after consuming any form of meat and the burping leads to a taste of that meat it means that break down was not completed properly. That's where proteolytic enzymes come to the rescue.

The two best sources of these unique enzymes are papaya and pineapple. But some people are allergic to these. That's where supplementation comes in. Papain is found in the leaves, root and fruit of the papaya plant. For thousands of years it has been used as meat tenderizer because of its power to break down proteins.

Proteolytic Enzymes also enhances the cardiovascular system.

On the other hand, there's bromelain. This is found in the skin, fruit and sweet juice of the pineapple plant. Other rich sources of these enzymes are: kiwi fruit, ginger, asparagus, yogurt to name a few. The problem is the quantity of these to be consumed in order to obtain maximum requirement. In the last couple of years I have added this to my health regimen with great results, especially with my digestion. Maybe, you can try them. I use phi-zymes from Baseline Nutritionals. Blessings for great health. 🌐

Water-Related Death

Shortly after 9:30AM on Tuesday, 11 February, officers responded to a report of a person in distress at the West Bay Dock. A woman had been out diving when she encountered difficulties, lost consciousness, and was brought back to shore. Emergency services attended the scene and she was transported to the hospital via ambulance where she was subsequently pronounced dead.

The woman was a 65-year-old visitor from the US.

HEARTFELT WORSHIP - EXODUS 15:21

When I first became a Christian, I loved singing the songs of the church. One of my favourites is, "JESUS PAID IT ALL." In our scripture above is another wonderful song, "the horse and its rider He hath thrown I the sea."

In Exodus 15, the Israelites, led by Moses, crossed the Red Sea safely. This miraculous event was nothing short of an act of God to rescue His people. In response to being delivered, Moses led the people in singing praises to God. This impromptu worship acknowledged God's strength and power in the act of deliverance. Moses and the people stood in awe of who God was and what He had done for them. Are you brought to a place of worship when you recall God's greatness in your life? When was the last time you and your family worshipped God for whom He is?

Cayman Brac Primary School Sports

By Shakir Khan

The stadiums were packed with parents and residents as the 2020 School Sports event was about to get underway. The morning started out windy and cool but by the time the first event got underway, the sun was out in all its brightness.

The primary schools students were grouped into two teams- HORNETS AND CHARGERS, the defending champions. After the march past which was really a beautiful sight as waves of yellow and red flooded the grounds of the Cayman Brac Sports Complex, The Minister for Education, the Hon. Mrs. Julianna O' Connor Connolly gave the opening remarks and then declared the days' event opened. The Minister was accompanied by the SSIO for the Sister Islands, Mr. Adrian Jones and Director of SASI, Mr. Mitchum Sanford.

As the various events took place, parents were very much excited in seeing their children participate. You could hear them urging the young ones as they thrust themselves into the event. The children participated with great enthusiasm and determination. As they lined up at the starters call area, it was so refreshing to hear them encouraging each other to well, even though they were in competition.

The bean bag event, featuring the tiny tots was one of the most exciting to watch. The joy and fervency with which they performed was admirable. And yes, the parents were there cheering them on to the finish line.

Another event was the 100 meters bicycle race. From start to finish it was loud cheering and tooting of horns as the cyclists rode their bicycles with gusto and determination.

The much anticipated relay events were held last of all. This event has become the most gruelling but generating the most excitement. First off were the Junior girls, 4 x100 meters. It was hotly contested and very competitive. You could see the girls stretching every muscle as the baton passed from one hand to next. Chargers won this event. Next, was the Junior boys. Here it was even more competitive and close indeed. But Hornets had some true speedsters and they triumphed in the event.

Next was the Senior girls 4x100 meters event. Pushing with intense determination, handing off the baton was really skilful. Yes, there was very close interchanging at the various 100m marks, but it was Hornets who sped away with this event.

The culminating event of the day was the Senior boys 4X 100m relay. This raised great buzz amongst the spectators with varying predictions of the winner. The event featured some of the fastest runners here on the Brac. With thunderous cheering and tooting of horns the event got off as expected-WITH SPEED. Some of the running and passing of batons were breath-taking. By the time the athletes began crossing the finish line, it was obvious that Hornets was going to take this event as well. And they did.

As the dust settled Hornets emerged as this year's winners, to rapturous applause. For this year the following were the champions:

Around 2:30 p.m the curtains came down on another exciting day of fun, excitement and competition. 🌐

GLOBAL NEWS BRIEFS

Canada's indigenous block new pipeline

Canada has seen protestors block access to road shipping ports and commuter rail lines in support of indigenous groups fighting the construction of a pipeline on their traditional territory.

Police arrested several activists in Vancouver who were part of a group that has blocked access to four shipping ports in recent days.

The protests are part of a nationwide show of support for the embattled Wet'suwet'en hereditary chiefs in the province of British Columbia – and for the 21 Indigenous activists who have been arrested in the past two weeks on Wet'suwet'en lands.

The chiefs have steadfastly refused to allow Coastal GasLink to construct part of its 670km natural gas pipeline through their traditional territory.

But last year, the British Columbia supreme court outraged the Wet'suwet'en, granting an injunction in favour of Coastal GasLink, which it said has suffered irreparable harm as a result of sustained opposition to the project. The chiefs maintain they never ceded land title to the province or federal government and thus maintain jurisdiction over the territory.

The US$5bn project has the support of 20 elected First Nations councils along the proposed route. Five of the six elected band councils in the Wet'suwet'en nation also support the pipeline. But Wet'suwet'en chiefs say the authority of these groups only applies to reservations – not traditional territory.

On Friday, members of the Tyendinaga Mohawk territory in Ontario parked a dump truck with a snowplough blade near a rail line, halting the Toronto-Ottawa corridor, one of the busiest commuter rail lines in the country. Dozens of trips over the weekend were cancelled. 🌐

Filipinos turn on Chinese over coronavirus

The Philippines announced the first death outside China from the coronavirus on Feb. 2 which originated in the central Chinese city of Wuhan late last year. The news set into motion a considerable public outcry targeting Philippine President Rodrigo Duterte and reignited a long history of racist treatment towards anyone of Chinese heritage.

Duterte's perceived reluctance to respond quickly to the virus, which critics saw as tied to his administration's cordial relations with the Chinese government, led the hashtag #OustDuterte to trend on Twitter.

The virus has not only shaken public trust in Duterte's government, which remains broadly popular, but it has also worsened the already fraught relationship between the majority of ethnic Filipinos and the country's sizable community of Chinese Filipinos, known locally as Tsinoyos, along with hundreds of thousands of Chinese nationals residing in the Philippines. While Chinese Filipinos are well integrated into Philippine society, resentment sometimes arises due to their relative wealth and their presence among the nation's elite.

Duterte announced an entry ban on Chinese travellers from affected areas on Jan. 31, one day after saying he did not want to restrict the entry of Chinese nationals. Two days later, the ban was expanded to all foreigners traveling from China and Hong Kong.

At press time, several cases have been confirmed in the Philippines, and over 300 people remain under watch for possible infections.

The anti-government backlash was sparked in the days before the travel ban. As Filipinos fretted about the virus's arrival, Health Secretary Francisco Duque rejected the idea of a temporary ban on Chinese tourists, saying it would spark "political and diplomatic repercussions." 🌐

Church campaigns to protect Hondurans

The Christian Lutheran Church of Honduras (ICLH) is sustaining its campaign to denounce the corruption, poverty and injustice that has forced hundreds of thousands of people to flee north towards Mexico and the United States in search of peace and security.

Standing alongside other churches and civil society organisations, ICLH members took part in protests in recent weeks denouncing the policies of a government that they accuse of dragging the country into an acute social and economic crisis.

On Jan. 29 church members took part in an ecumenical action outside the National Congress in the capital of Tegucigalpa. Among the policies they were protesting was the government's decision not to renew the mandate of the Mission to Support the Fight against Corruption and Impunity in Honduras (MACCIH), set up by the Organisation of American States in 2016 to investigate allegations of corruption by public officials and private citizens.

► Honduran churches are demanding a better society

Demonstrators also took part in a protest as part of events marking Honduran Women's Day, denouncing the government of President Juan Orlando Hernandez whose election they have contested since he was declared the winner of the November 2017 ballot. Several people have died in election related protests, while the president has failed to fulfil his promise of tackling organised crime, drug violence and gang warfare. The country continues to have one of the highest murder rates per capita in the world. 🌐

Cuba to trade vehicles in dollars

Cuba's cash-strapped government will start selling cars in tradeable currencies rather than in convertible Cuban pesos from Feb. 24 as it continues to introduce the American dollar in swathes of its retail sector.

The country's inefficient state-run economy is going through a liquidity crisis due to the implosion of ally Venezuela's economy and the tightening of the decades-old US trade embargo under President Donald Trump.

In recent months, the government has opened around 80 "dollar stores" selling some of the items such as home appliances and car parts that it must buy abroad in tradeable currencies.

Finance Minister Meisi Bolaños Weiss said there would be a discount of 10 percent on the current price in convertible pesos, although that means they will remain at a huge mark-up given the current mark ups of 400 percent or more.

► Cubans cannot afford newly imported cars

That means modern cars will not crowd out the 1950s vintage Chevys and Soviet-era Ladas that still dominate Cuba's streets any time soon. The profit will go towards a fund for improving Cuba's inadequate public transportation.

The price of imported vehicles is prohibitive for almost all Cubans as they range from $15,000 to $110,000 in a country where the average annual salary is less than $6,000. 🌐

Venezuela still has Russia's support

Russia's foreign minister Sergey Lavrov visited Caracas last Friday in a show of support for Venezuela's President Nicolás Maduro.

United States president Donald Trump met Venezuela's opposition leader Juan Guaidó at the White House two weeks ago. After disputing president Nicolas Maduro's 2018 controversial re-election, Guaidó proclaimed himself the country's interim president, and was backed by almost 60 countries, including the EU, the US and UK.

Lavrov urged the international community to back a "political and diplomatic" solution to Venezuela's troubles and denounced the US campaign to oust Maduro with sanctions. The Trump administration unveiled fresh sanctions against a fleet of commercial planes belonging to the Venezuelan state-owned CONVIASA airlines.

Maduro also condemned Trump's support of Guaidó. Under Maduro's leadership, Venezuela has suffered an economic collapse. More than four million citizens have fled the country, many to Colombia.

► Sergey Lavrov is backing the Venezuelan regime

"Sadly, Venezuela's crisis is part of a grand campaign with the end goal of overthrowing the legitimate government. We consider this scenario unacceptable", Lavrov said.

He also met with other officials to talk about cooperation in areas such as energy, mining, agriculture, medicine and military-technical cooperation:

"It is important to develop our military technical cooperation to increase the defence capacity of our friends against outside threats," Lavrov added.

Russia and Venezuela have a political, military and economic alliance that began years ago between Russia's president Vladimir Putin and Venezuela's late-president Hugo Chávez. 🌐

Jamaican detainees flown out of UK

The UK Home Office has proceeded with a planned deportation flight to Jamaica of detainees who have committed crimes despite some serving their sentences many years ago and not breaking the law since. Some had even arrived in the UK as children and now have little or no connection with Jamaica. This has led to mass outrage and protests.

The flight left on Tuesday despite a court of appeal judge ordering the Home Office not to deport many of the detainees amid concerns over their access to legal advice.

A Home Office spokesman said: "We make no apology for trying to protect the public from serious, violent and persistent foreign national offenders. The court ruling does not apply to all of the foreign national offenders due to be deported and we are therefore proceeding with the flight."

It was unclear immediately how many people were on board the flight, but it is thought to be around 50.

On Monday night, a court of appeal judge ordered the Home Office not to carry out the scheduled deportation

► The detainees were held in these detention centres

amid concerns mobile phone outages had prevented detainees from having access to legal advice.

Lady Justice Simler said those detainees should not be removed unless the Home Office was satisfied, they "had access to a functioning, non-O2 Sim card on or before Feb. 3."

The action had been brought because there has been a problem with the O2 phone network in the Heathrow detention centres since last month, meaning many detainees had been unable to exercise their legal right to contact their lawyers.

The Home Office had argued the flight was "specifically for deporting foreign national offenders", adding that "those detained for removal include people convicted of manslaughter, rape, violent crime and dealing class A drugs". But some of those on the flight had been imprisoned for short terms and relatively minor offences. 🌐

Giannis will keep hold of MVP title

Superstar forward Giannis Antetokounmpo is happy the Milwaukee Bucks' front office didn't make any trades at the trade deadline last week. He likes the cohesion and team spirit and feels a newcomer might disrupt the balance.

Antetokounmpo is eager to lead the Bucks to the championship this season after what transpired in the 2019 playoffs. Milwaukee lost to Kawhi Leonard and the Toronto Raptors in six games in the Eastern Conference Finals despite the fact they had a 2-0 lead in the series before the Canadian franchise won four games in a row.

The Bucks were 44-7 this season at press time. Antetokounmpo is averaging 30.2 points, 13.4 rebounds and 5.8 assists while shooting 55.3 percent from the field, 31.3 percent from beyond the arc and 61.2 percent from the free-throw line.

He could win his second straight MVP award since he's putting up stellar numbers once more and the Bucks are cruising through the regular season.

► Giannis Antetokounmpo aims for his second successive MVP

► Luka Doncic has impressed in his second season

In betting circles, the "Greek Freak" is a prohibitive favourite for the award which makes sense. Luka Doncic of the Dallas Mavericks is the likely second placed candidate, but LeBron James has also been amazing for the Los Angeles Lakers. He admits that Kobe Bryant's untimely death last month has hit him hard and is probably even more focused in training and games to honour his hero's great legacy.

The Mavericks will not prohibit Doncic from participating in the NBA All-Star Game on Sunday if his ankle feels healthy enough to play. He was ruled out for Monday's game against the Utah Jazz, but Mavs head coach Rick Carlisle said the team would have no issue with Doncic's desire to play "if that's how the timing of his recovery works out".

Monday night marked Doncic's seventh consecutive absence from the line up as he continues to recover from a sprained right ankle suffered during a practice at the end of January. The Mavs are being especially cautious with his health given he suffered the same injury earlier in the season.

Slovenian Doncic has been tremendous in his second season, averaging 28.8 points, 9.5 rebounds and 8.7 assists through his first 43 games while also leading the league in offensive box plus-minus and ranking third in value over replacement player. Quite impressive stats for a 20-year-old.

In the Western Conference, James has led the Lakers to the No. 1 spot in the standings by leading the NBA in assists with a career-high 10.8 at the tender age of 35. His point production (25.1) is its lowest since his rookie NBA season, but that goes with the territory when playing alongside a second superstar in Anthony Davis.

Who has had the best season for the best team? Giannis and LeBron get the nods there. Doncic, even though he has missed nine of 52 games due to injuries, leads the NBA in triple doubles with 12 for the Mavericks.

Another overachieving team is the Miami Heat, and there is an argument to be made that Jimmy Butler is a more worthy choice than Doncic. That argument is not based upon the big three stats: points rebounds and assists, because Doncic has the edge in all three.

Rather, for those who subscribe to the "winning means everything" mentality will note that the Heat have more victories (34 to 31) than the Mavericks, and Miami are competing for third place in the East during a season in which the traditional discrepancy between the relative strength of the East and the relative strength of the West has disappeared. 🌐

Depressed Pele becomes reclusive through ill health

Legendary Brazil footballer Pele is reluctant to leave his house because he cannot walk unaided, his son has said.

The three-time World Cup winner, widely regarded as the greatest player of all time, was taken to hospital with a urinary infection last year.

Pele, 79, has had problems with his hip for some time and now needs a frame to walk, with many of his recent public appearances in a wheelchair.

"He is very sheepish, reclusive," his son Edinho said. Pele scored a world record total of 1,281 goals in 1,363 appearances during his 21-year career, including 77 goals in 91 appearances for Brazil.

His health has been a concern in recent years and he had prostate surgery in 2015 after he was admitted to hospital for the second time in six months.

"Imagine, he's the King, he was always such an imposing figure and today he can't walk properly," Edinho explained.

"He's embarrassed, he doesn't want to go out, be seen, or do practically anything that involves leaving the house.

"He's pretty fragile. He had a hip replacement and didn't have an adequate or ideal rehabilitation. So he has this problem with mobility and that has set off a kind of depression."

This June marks the 50th anniversary of Pele's final World Cup title, won in Mexico with what many believe to be the greatest team of all time. 🌐

Hamilton makes up with dad ahead of new season

Lewis Hamilton has spoken candidly about his attempts to repair what he says has been "not the easiest of relationships" with father Anthony. The pair's heritage is Grenadian.

The six-time world champion was managed by his father when he started in Formula 1 in 2007. But that working relationship ended in 2010, after which they did not speak for a time.

"Our journey hasn't been an easy one," said Mercedes driver Hamilton on social media.

"Over time, we lost that father-son bond and it has been something we have both wanted back for so long."

The 35-year-old Brit's Mercedes team unveil their 2020 car on Friday before pre-season testing starts at Spain's Circuit de Barcelona-Catalunya on Wednesday.

It is the machine Hamilton hopes will take him to a seventh world title, which would equal Michael Schumacher's record.

Hamilton is also just seven victories short of the German's record 91 wins, a mark he will surpass this season if he keeps up his average of 10 victories a year which he secured since Mercedes started their dominant run in 2014.

Hamilton said: "I'm going to be a machine this year; on another level than ever before." 🌐

Russell: We'll retain our World T20 crown

Andre Russell, the explosive West Indies all-rounder, believes that his team can retain the World T20 crown later this year in Australia.

"We are going to win the World Cup and there are no two ways about it. We have to go into the World Cup wanting to win and having that mindset — you cannot think that some team is better than us," he said.

Under a new, more positive West Indies Cricket regimes, Russell feels the West Indies will be a power again. "A lot needs to be still done. We are looking towards ourselves and trying to bring back the old days of winning series and winning the fans again. This won't happen overnight, and we all have to make sure that whatever tournament we take part, we do our best that we can."

Jamaican Russell believes he can still improve. "I just want to be the best all-rounder but I have been struggling with my knees and I cannot really get to do what I want to do in the middle. With what I believe I know I can still stand and hit the balls for fours and sixes. I want to leave my name over there so that any youngster can say they want to be like (Andre) Russell and do what he has done.

"I am 31, I still have a long way to go. My goal is try and win at least 13 league championships around the world before I retire. That is lot of championships, to be honest, but those are the goals I have set for myself and I want to score over 10,000 to 12,000 T20 runs."

Russell's approach has made cricket entertaining and he wants the sport to figure in the Olympics. "Cricket needs to be part of the Olympics. It's a big international sport and I am not going to say that some of the sport I have seen in the Olympics are not relevant. I believe cricket is one of the worldwide sports and I am just disappointed that it is still not part of the Olympics. I want to see cricket in Olympics even it is played in T10 or even five-over format, but cricket should be there." 🌐
