Self-Protection as part of Better Health for Self

By Andrew Vincent MBA DipM
Director, Integra Healthcare Ltd

Is it the State's responsibility to protect our health, or our own? Of course, that's a black and white question when the answer involves every shade of grey. And because the answer is grey, we can pretty much choose our answer... and we do. In reality, nobody is going to value us as individuals more than we do ourselves, and so it stands to reason we should be at the helm of our own health security.

Of course, the State does have a vital role in health protection, and we see this most prominently at the times of a pandemic such as Covid-19. When the threat is severe and rapidly evolving, health protection measures, from simple avoidance of risky activities to full-scale vaccine programmes become necessary not just to protect individuals but to guard against the risks posed by individuals towards others. However, increasingly across the Globe, we see portions of populations rallying against Government-sponsored health protection, alongside portions ironically claiming Government is not doing enough. The question we should perhaps all be asking is "what are we doing to protect ourselves?"

By the time this article is read, I should be the proud recipient of my 4th Covid-19 vaccine dose, chosen because I believe it is in my own best health security interest. It's a decision I thought about, carefully, and hopefully objectively. Every decision is a balance between risk-benefit, based on information that is constantly evolving. If we wait for complete certainty, we carry a much higher risk of the threat affecting us. So, what did I consider? The following went into my choice:

- My own health status, which is self-claimed not quite yet perfect!
- Risk factors I have, and besides being 54 years young, I do have some
- The evidence for vaccine effectiveness and safety, from reliable sources
- An actual look at my antibody status, along with discussion of such with a professional
- My personal experience of Covid-19, which I acquired in the Summer

The latter was significant. I was already fully vaccinated and boosted. My booster was in late October 2021. We know that protection declines over time. A vaccine can protect against you catching something and help you recover successfully from it. I recovered, as this column proves, but the experience is not one I wish to repeat, resulting in a loss of 8 working days, a set of horrible symptoms and an extended period of sometimes debilitating exhaustion. Only time will tell if there are any lasting effects. We are still learning.

At this point, some may be asking; "So if you had Covid that recently, why are you now vaccinating? Surely, you have naturally immunity?"

As a professional working in healthcare, I know that immune responses can be very different from one person to the next. We know that the later variants sometimes do not produce the same natural immunity or lasting immunity that the earlier ones did. So, I waited, and then I tested (Attomarker Ltd Covid-19 Antibody Immunity Test). And that test showed that although I had good levels of antibodies in an area that is more variable in its protective effect, I was on the borderline for levels of the main antibodies that could prevent me from getting another infection... already... just 12 weeks on from the last infection. So, it's vaccination for me, confidently.

The point is that we must take responsibility for our own health choices, including health protection, but do so in an informed fashion. We are individuals, with individual risks and individual responses. We should seek the right answers, not decide on our favoured answered and then seek the evidence to support it. That's not always easy in a tsunami of misinformation surrounding health issues, especially when the true understanding is also constantly evolving.

Consequently, there is still no substitute for the informed opinion of a trusted medical professional, who has a career responsibility to remain up-to-date with the latest understanding, access to reliable sources for latest evidence, and tests and evaluations that help inform personal health choices. And as the World moves towards personalised medicine in the growing understanding we are more uniquely individual than we ever thought possible, it should remind us that this does require our active engagement, decisions and actions, including around health security.

Three happy parrots released at the Botanic Park

By Christopher Tobutt

The Cayman Turtle Conservation and Education Centre released three happy parrots in the Botanic Park Children's Garden. Not everybody knows that the Cayman Turtle Centre has been breeding Cayman Parrots ever since 2008, when it began to take care of injured parrots and they started breeding in captivity. Since then they have raised many little pink featherless parrot-chicks from eggs to adulthood, so it was no surprise that, in 2021 when one of the trees with a parrot's nest in it fell over at the Dart Nursery, and three tiny chicks were found, the Department of the Environment called on the Turtle Centre's Geddes Hislop and Veterinarian Dr. Navi to help.

Telling their story, Dr. Navi said: "These parrots were found at the Dart plant nursery on a Friday evening at 6pm and the Department of Environment called us out during that time. When we got there we realized that these guys were very dehydrated and very weak so we immediately sprung into action and we decided to force feed them for that night.

The next day we went back out, and in collaboration with the DOE and with Dart we tried to make an artificial nest up a tree, very close to where the tree was that fell with their original nest. Upon trying that for two days, we realized that the parents weren't coming back for these chicks, so we decided that they would need to be hand raised. We hand raised them from little chicks which had no feathers and their eyes weren't even open, to now, where they have all their feathers and they are fully grown. They have been transitioned from a pelleted formula diet to actually eating wild food and learning to forage on their own. We're hoping that, being released in the Botanic Park and hearing other parrots around, and seeing their natural food in the wild they'll have a better chance of surviving out here.

Curator of Terrestrial Exhibits Geddes Hislop explained why Cayman's two national birds, the Grand Cayman Parrot and the Cayman Brac Parrot were in danger: "They're losing habitat, Poaching is an issue and getting hit by cars so that all of their problems have something to do with people,"

Since 2008 we've been breeding parrots and releasing them into the wild. Its been successful and we've learned a lot about the birds, and have partners and friends at the DOE and the parrot sanctuary. They need somewhere to live and the botanic park is a perfect place, because its sixty acres of protected beauty.

Manager of the Botanic Park John Lawrus said, "I'd just like to thank the Turtle Centre, and the partners that are involved in the release today. And welcome everyone to the children's garden located in the botanic park."

It was time for the release, and some of the children came to help open the cage doors and set the Parrots free. One by one the doors were opened, and the parrots flew away into the sky to start their new life in the wild.

SPEAKER BUSH QUILTS BUT QUESTIONS PERSIST

By Staff Writer

In a dramatic turn of events in the ongoing political saga surrounding him, Hon. Speaker of Parliament McKeeva Bush has abruptly tendered his resignation.

In a statement released on Wednesday evening, October 5th, Mr Bush announced that he has written to Hon. Premier Wayne Panton advising him that he was stepping down effective November 30th.

In a recorded message Mr Bush referred to Tuesday October 3rd as the date of his letter. October 3rd was in fact this past Monday.

"In light of the circumstances. I have taken the decision and tendered my resignation on Tuesday, the third of October to take effect the 30th of November...I do so in the interest of all parties."

The circumstances he referred to are allegations of recent misconduct towards women in which he has become embroiled resulting in the Premier and the Governor calling on him to resign, and the Opposition filing a motion of no-confidence in him. That motion was dramatically blocked by the Deputy Speaker yesterday (Wednesday 5th October).

In a previous letter dated September 15th, Hon. Premier Wayne Panton had given the Speaker an ultimatum to resign by September 23rd over the widely circulated allegations.

Mr Bush has not been charged with any offence regarding those allegations and the RCIPS has called on anyone directly involved to come forward to make a formal complaint. To date, no one has come forward.

RESIGNATION DEMANDED

In his letter to the Speaker concerning the serious allegations, Mr Panton had referred to "the unfortunate incidents at the cocktail reception held on Tuesday evening last at the Ritz-Carlton, Grand Cayman, and considering your history of similar incidents, in respect of some of which you have existing convictions and an outstanding suspended sentence, this makes these latest incidents wholly intolerable."

Mr Panton was referring to Mr Bush's previous conviction in 2020 for assaulting a woman.

He went on to state: "It is clear that your conduct is inconsistent with the integrity and decorum required of the Speaker of the House of Parliament of the Cayman Islands. It is my strong view, a view shared by many, that it is now in the best interests of the people of the Cayman Islands if you were to tender your resignation as Speaker on or before 5pm September 23, 2022..."

► Speaker Hon McKeeva Bush

A RELUCTANT RESIGNATION?

But in his recorded message announcing that he is stepping down, Mr Bush said he was doing so despite his supporters and family urging him to remain in the post.

"Despite my constituents, colleagues, and friends among others who insist I should remain in office as a Speaker of the House, I have given the matter serious consideration. (I am) very much fully aware of the political nature the matter has taken on and the negative impact and toll it continues to take on my constituents, my colleagues, my family, the wider country and the diaspora having emotional distraught, it caused grief, mental anguish and various damages to our well being."

He declared: "In light of the circumstances, I have taken the decision and tendered my resignation on Tuesday, the third of October to take effect the 30th of November...I do so in the interest of all parties."

The outgoing Speaker, a former premier who is also a sitting MP and long-standing member of Parliament, also defended his record in public office.

"My record of service and contribution to the Cayman Islands will stand the test of time and history will show that I have done as much for the growth and development of this country, taking care of our people as best as we could over the years as any other elected member of the honourable House."

While he has not been charged with any offence related to the recent swirl of allegations of misconduct towards women, the issue has marked a fractious period in Cayman politics.

Mr Bush was due to preside over a meeting of the Parliament this Friday October 7th in which the Opposition had tabled a motion of no-confidence against the PACT government of Premier Wayne Panton.

RESIGNATION QUESTIONED

In reaction to the Speaker's resignation statement the Opposition Progressives were sceptical and put out statement titled: 'Speaker Bush Again Promises To Resign', calling the move unacceptable.

"A statement from the Speaker to Radio Cayman late Wednesday evening stating that he is resigning effective November 30th is unacceptable to the Opposition and should be unacceptable to every member of Parliament. We are of the view that it will also be unacceptable to the majority of the public. Further, this is the second pronouncement of the Speaker that he will resign. Where is the resignation letter?" they asked.

The Progressives had also issued a previous statement saying that the Deputy Speaker, Katherine Ebanks-Wilks, had blocked a separate motion of no-confidence that they had filed against Speaker Bush.

Saying the decision was "unprecedented", leader of the Progressives, Roy McTaggart said: "The motion complies in every material respect with the Standing Orders of the House, and it is therefore surprising and alarming that it appears to have been disapproved arbitrarily as no reason was given. This action in my experience is unprecedented."

MOTION RENDERED MOTIONLESS

In their current statement, questioning whether Mr Bush will in fact step down, the opposition party's leader Roy McTaggart, also raised the matter of their blocked no-confidence in the Speaker.

"The Deputy Speaker wrote to me at 4:55 pm this afternoon (Wednesday) advising that she has been too busy with constituents matters to provide reasons for her refusal to approve our lack of confidence in the Speaker motion. She has said that she "will provide the detailed explanation for refusing the motion of lack of confidence in the Speaker no later than 12:00pm on Thursday 6th October 2022. We look forward to her response."

He insisted that the motion of a Lack of Confidence in the Speaker complies in every material respect with the Standing Orders of Parliament.

"We insist that our motion of a lack of confidence in the Speaker must be heard. It would be both an affront to democratic principles and a breach of good governance for our motion to be hijacked by the Deputy Speaker," Mr McTaggart wrote.

He also said it should be noted that the purported resignation of the Speaker will not take effect for another two months, if at all.

"The lack of confidence motion will bring clarity and certainty to this unfortunate situation as well as ensure confidence in the Parliament."

UNANSWERED QUESTIONS

With Mr Bush now announcing that he is stepping down effective November 30th, it was still not clear if he will be presiding over this Friday's sitting of Parliament or if he will be stepping back from his duties until his resignation takes effect.

What is also unclear is if Premier Panton will accept the Speaker's resignation as dated, given that he had set Mr Bush an ultimatum of September 23rd to quit, or if he will demand that the substantive Speaker steps down forthwith.

Blue Iguana Conservation Launches New Citizen Science Mobile Application

Blue Iguana Conservation (BIC), managed by the National Trust for the Cayman Islands (NTCI) is excited to officially launch 'E-guana' - its brand-new Citizen Science Mobile App.

The NTCI is calling on and inviting the general public and visitors to the Islands to download this new, free, mobile application and use it to submit pictures of any iguanas seen on any of our three islands, whether alive or deceased. This vital data will help inform the NTCI of iguana locations to help monitor populations of endemic Rock Iguanas, endemic Blue Iguanas and manage in real time responses to reports of invasive species, such as green iguanas.

BIC Programme Manager, Luke Harding said, "We are delighted to be able to launch this exciting app and encourage everyone who is either residing on, or visiting, these incredible Cayman Islands to do their bit to help us manage our endangered iguana species. The data submitted will be vital to increase our knowledge and understanding of where the iguanas are or prefer to be. The more information that we can gather from our general public, the better informed we will be to help protect Grand Cayman's Blue Iguanas and the Sister Islands' Rock Iguana species and deal with threats such as invasive species, development and road infrastructure."

National Trust Chairperson, Melanie Carmichael said, "It is wonderful to see technology and science working together to help educate and monitor these rare and endangered species. Such small actions can manifest big impacts and each person gets the opportunity to be involved. The National Trust are very grateful for the institutions and donors sponsoring this work and I can't wait to see what will be discovered."

The mobile app was developed in partnership with Jay Mehta, Netclues and funded via private donations and a Darwin Plus grant. The app is free to download from the App Store (iOS) or Google Play (Android) and is very easy to use.

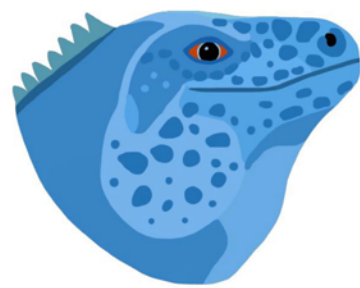

Collected data will only be used for scientific purposes pertaining to any of the three iguana species found on our Islands: Grand Cayman's Blue Iguanas, Sister Islands' (Cayman Brac and Little Cayman) Rock Iguanas or the invasive green iguanas. The NTCI encourages users to submit sightings, with photographs of the iguana wherever possible, so that more information can be gleaned about the location of iguanas and their threats, [in particularly to Cayman's endemic species,] which will be highly valuable to the research.

"We encourage everyone across all three islands to download this app and join us in building a picture of what is out there. Whether you see iguanas on your land, on the road or when you are roaming around the islands, please do submit sightings through E-guana and that important data will be added to our system. We live in a world where many people are connected to their phones, giving us a unique opportunity to utilize social trends to help further science and conservation efforts. Please do download 'E-guana' and encourage everyone you know to use it as well," says Luke Harding, BIC Programme Manager.

New Senior Leadership Team at Ministry of IISD Champion Short and Long-term Modernising Reforms

► Ministry of Investment, Innovation and Social Development staff, Department Directors & Deputy Directors

By Kenda Okonski

The Senior Leadership of the Ministry of Investment, Innovation and Social Development (www.gov.ky/iisd) has changed, with a new Acting Chief Officer and two Acting Deputy Chief Officers having been appointed. The Ministry's leadership and staff joined with the directors and deputies of its eight departments this past week for an interim progress update.

The overall remit of the Ministry and its departments spans from reforming and modernising the Government's delivery of financial assistance, providing both social work services and inclusive support for adults with special needs. At the same time, its mandate includes building a robust entrepreneurial ecosystem for micro and small businesses and leveraging of strategic investment. It also includes the custodians of Government's digital infrastructure and cyber safety, and the architects of Government's burgeoning digital identity programme.

The Hon. Minister stated,

"The Ministry of Investment, Innovation and Social Development was created by Government to pursue and enact truly transformative changes that will create long-lasting value for both people and Government. It was inspiring and a genuine pleasure to join the full Ministry team and senior management of each department at the recent update meeting. The Ministry team has my utmost confidence in its ability to deliver on this vision."

Ms. Tamara Ebanks joined the Ministry as the Acting Chief Officer in June 2022. Her career in the Civil Service has spanned more than two decades, working within numerous Ministries and subject areas. ACO Ms. Ebanks observed that the Ministry's successes have emanated from the team's close collaboration with the Hon. Minister André Ebanks. She said,

"During my relatively short tenure so far at the Ministry of Investment, Innovation and Social Development, I have observed the impressive energy and passion that drives the entire team. I am honored to lead a dynamic group of people who are united in their ambitions to bring meaningful and measurable reforms to fruition, in tandem with the elected Government's strategic priorities."

Prior to her MIISD appointment, Ms. Ebanks most recently served as the Deputy Chief Officer in the Ministry of Planning, Agriculture, Housing and Infrastructure. Before that role, she served as Deputy Chief Officer in the Ministry of Commerce, Planning and Infrastructure, and before that, in the Ministry of Financial Services, Commerce and Environment.

In each of these, she contributed significantly to the development and enhancement of the Ministries' respective portfolios and departments, including development of legislation, regulation and policy; finance and budget; and talent development and retention. She also held several appointments to key steering committees.

In addition to extensive civil service knowledge and over twenty years of working experience, Ms. Ebanks also brings academic accomplishments to the role, with a Master's Degree in Human Resource Management with distinction from the University of Portsmouth; a Bachelor's Degree in Sociology with Honors from York University, and numerous certifications.

In June 2022, two Acting Deputy Chief Officers (DCO) were appointed: Mr. Rayle Roberts, Acting DCO for Social Development, and Mr. Trevor Gibbs. Mr. Gibbs stepped into the role of Acting DCO for Investment and Innovation for two months prior to the appointment of Mr. Charles Brown to this role in mid-August 2022.

Combining the unique talents and attributes of these individuals, the Ministry leadership brings a wealth of experience and achievements to the Ministry's portfolio.

Acting Deputy Chief Officer Charles Brown stated:

"The Ministry seeks both to tackle challenges and to capitalise on compelling opportunities, whether they are incremental or vast within the Ministry's three distinct yet related subject areas. In particular, we are pursuing purposeful investment and innovation initiatives that advance social development for the people of the Cayman Islands. This means expanding prospects for entrepreneurs, creating modern digital infrastructure that makes it easier for people and businesses to operate and succeed, and specific initiatives focused on improving quality of life for Caymanians."

Acting Deputy Chief Officer Rayle Roberts stated,

"The Ministry is leading Government's ambitious efforts to re-imagine social development. We have taken a pragmatic and streamlined approach to solving internal resource needs, and by doing so, the Ministry in collaboration with its Departments has delivered immediate, tangible improvements that serve people with dignity and compassion. We are also exploring and undertaking entirely new initiatives that will enable Government to 'leapfrog' over significant bureaucratic hurdles -- which all too often result in heartless decisions for the sake of box ticking."

Recent highlights of the Ministry's work and that of its departments include

- * The draft Financial Assistance Bill 2022 to be considered by Parliament in October. If passed, this legislative reform will create modern and fit for purpose legislation to govern the Government's financial assistance given to Caymanians - creating accountability as well as legal recourse. (more info<<https://www.gov.ky/news/press-release-details/financial-assistance-bill-2022>>)

- * Streamlining processes for the Needs Assessment Unit (NAU), including requests for housing repairs, and most recently the creation of a "Continuation Certificate" (more info<https://www.gov.ky/news/press-release-details/nau-eligibility-criteria\_july2022>) for the benefit of older persons, as well as those who are permanently disabled, who have already qualified for Government's financial assistance.

- * Housing Repairs Assistance: This program continues to deliver repairs to homes, to make them watertight and secure from hazards, for Caymanians.

- * Relocation of the Sunrise Adult Training Centre to a larger and modern interim premises, centrally located in George Town. (more info<<https://www.gov.ky/news/press-release-details/sunrise-centre-opens-in-new-location>>)

- * Primary sponsorship and involvement in the 2022 Cayman Islands Digital Economy Conference (more info<<https://www.gov.ky/news/press-release-details/cydec-2022>>), including a highly regarded presentation about the upcoming national/digital ID project. The Ministry has conducted extensive focus groups and presentations across the community, and pending approval of Cabinet, expects draft legislation to be ready for public consultation in the fourth quarter of 2022.

- * The launch of two significant Centre for Business Development initiatives - the "Raising Capital" Forum and the "Grow Your Business" programme, designed for Caymanian entrepreneurs to scale up their micro- and small businesses.

- * Two Ministry visits to Cayman Brac; one in July 2022 to the District Administration, Needs Assessment Unit, Department of Children and Family Services, and the Kirkconnell Care Home (more info<<https://www.gov.ky/news/press-release-details/ministry-iisd-cayman-brac-july2022>>), and one in August 2022 to facilitate insight gathering through focus groups.

Acting CO Tamara Ebanks added, "We often hear about breaking down silos in Government; the portfolio of subject areas and departments housed within the Ministry of Investment, Innovation and Social Development has necessitated this approach from the outset. With the breadth of cross-Governmental experience that characterises the entire team, it is my earnest hope and belief that we will continue to make significant progress for the benefit of all who live, work and do business in the Cayman Islands."
