Businessman, Musician and Seafarer Cardinal DaCosta: A life of service to country

► Cardinal DaCosta performing live

► Businessman and Singer Mr. Cardinal DaCosta has passed away.

By Stuart Wilson

Caymanian business pioneer, Musician, Seafarer and family man Cardinal DaCosta passed away on 17th February, 2024 at the age of 88.

Born on March 1935 and hailing from the Newlands area of Grand Cayman, Mr. DaCosta was best known for establishing Puritan Cleaners, an enterprise which has endured the test of time and has been in business for over 66 years, serving the dry cleaning needs of the Cayman Islands since 1958.

In addition to being a pillar of the business community, Mr. DaCosta was a well known musician, who played the guitar and harmonica in addition to being a renowned vocalist whose song, "Pieces of Eight," was a massive commercial success both in the Cayman Islands and regionally.

Another release from Mr. Cardinal DaCosta, "Dockside Guide" was also well received. His trademark baritone delivery and singing style can also be heard on the Puritan Cleaners radio ad on local stations promoting the enterprise.

The Caymanian Times spoke with his eldest son, Mr. Mobrey DaCosta about his father's legacy and the awesome task of walking in his footsteps that lies ahead for the family and business.

"He was still taking an active role in the business all the way up until the end and would call during the day or night and even wanted to cut another record at some point," said Mobrey, who added that

He added that after Covid-19 in 2020, Mr. Cardinal had taken a more hands-off approach and allowed his children to run the business.

Of the five children and loving wife Joy DaCosta, left to mourn Mr. DaCosta's passing, his son Mobrey is still directly involved in running the business his father built.

He explained that during his father's time at sea, which commenced at the age of 19, Mr. Cardinal DaCosta was responsible for painting, in addition to oiling the pistons.

His first experiences into the cleaning business began some years before that, at the age of 14, working for Mr. Clayton Merren on North Church Street.

"They were doing painting and pressing there and back in those days they used paint thinner to get rid of stains," said Mobrey, noting that after saving up money from his time at sea, Mr. Cardinal returned to Grand Cayman and used his savings to launch Puritan Cleaners.

At the time, people were wondering who would fill the void after Mr. Clayton Merren and since Mr. Cardinal had experience in that business, he decided to take up the mantle.

The company started out on North Church Street, where the Rackams Pub is located today.

In 1984, as the company was growing, the decision was made to move to Eastern Avenue, where they are located today.

During the years of growing Puritan cleaners, Mr. DaCosta was somewhat of a visionary, realizing that hotels in Grand Cayman would need industrial cleaning services before the service was available anywhere else.

"He had faith that the hotels would need the service and due to his experience in the business, he had a hunch that this was a void that would need to be filled," Mobrey remarked, adding that his father was a very determined person who would purchase all the necessary equipment and go to America to inspect machinery and make upgrades when necessary.

"He managed to do all of this while raising five children," he remarked, noting that because of their upbringing and watching their father, he and his siblings were able to learn the value of a dollar.

"We will definitely continue in the path he set, of innovating and renovating and our goal is to continue to make the business more environmentally friendly and continuing to train staff," Mobrey explained.

Other members of the business community commented on Mr. DaCosta's kind words of advice and the example he set, telling the Caymanian Times that he always encouraged them and would tell them to stick with their business in the toughest of times and to keep adapting and believing in themselves.

A member of the Seafarer's Association for many years, Mr. DaCosta was also very active in the community and the impact that he has left on the Cayman Islands will be felt for many years to come.

Known for his stick-to-it style of approaching business and life, personal drive and initiative and love for the Cayman Islands, Mr. Cardinal DaCosta's legacy is a portrait of a lifetime of hard work and commitment to family and dedication to country.

Ralph Lewis, Caymanian Times Publisher and family friend noted how his wife Joy held his hand right up until the end and was an integral part of his journey and success.

The funeral service for Mr. Cardinal DaCosta will be held on 16th March at the Baptist Church in Newlands (near Pedro St. James). Viewing is scheduled from 1pm to 2pm.

OfReg monitoring intermittent Flow mobile phone service issues

Flow is experiencing intermittent issues with their mobile service. Utilities regulator, OfReg, has requested information from Flow and have been provided some information on the issues and the work they are undertaking to resolve.

OfReg's independent preliminary inquiries suggest that some customers may experience intermittent dropped calls or degraded signal reception. Some customers may experience no issues at all.

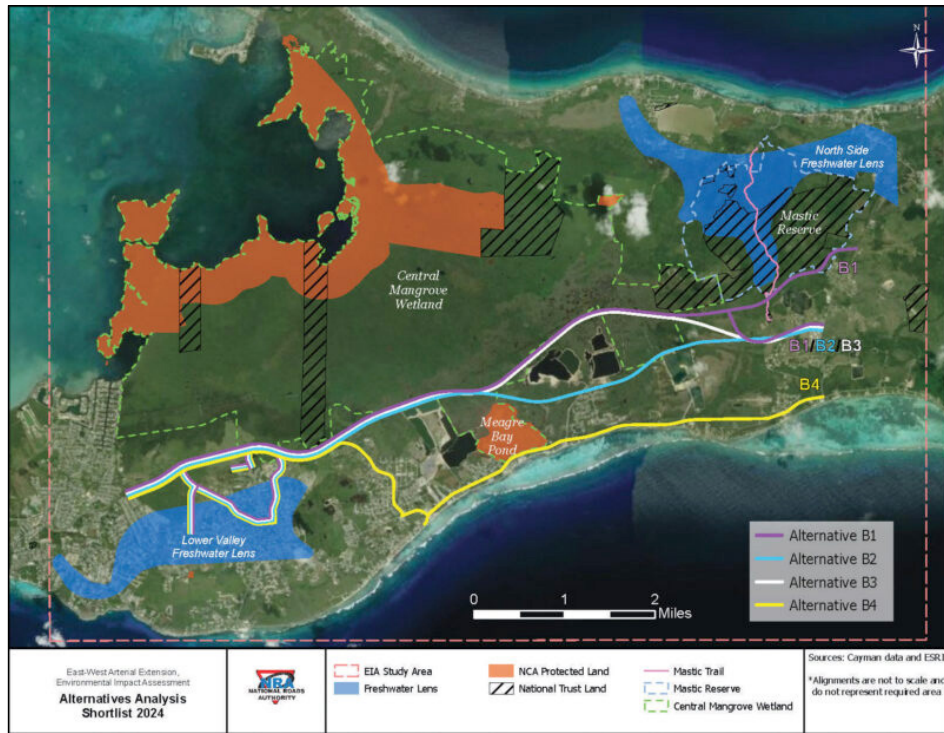

There is no information which indicates that the issues impact calls to 911 but the regulator is making further inquiries.

The regulator is actively monitoring Flow's work to address the issues in a reasonable, timely manner. Evaluation of the work will determine if further intervention from OfReg is required sooner.

The EIA for the EWA road is a multi-disciplinary study that evaluates the potential impact on the environment and communities due to the construction of the proposed road. The results are used by decision-makers in the Cayman Islands Government to inform the final EWA road scheme that can provide opportunities and amenities to enhance the quality of life and travel for all users such as pedestrians, bicyclists, and transit riders.

The NRA Managing Director, Mr. Edward Howard said, "The EWA is more than just a road extension. It's the optimal solution to enhance connectivity between the eastern and western sides of our island, lay the foundation for future, sustainable development in Grand Cayman, and improve the resilience of our road infrastructure during natural disasters."

Regarding the EIA, he mentioned that "The EIA is a required step in the EWA's development process. It is also best practice and commonplace in many other developed countries around the world. The EWA EIA does not make decisions but does provide decision-makers in Cayman with the best information to balance the needs of Caymanian families and residents with sustainable development and environmental conservation."

The EIA is being conducted under the requirements of the National Conservation Act (2013) to evaluate potential positive and negative impacts on a wide range of features including transport and mobility, areas of protected natural flora and fauna habitats, hydrology and drainage and socio-economic and cultural elements.

Following the publication of draft EIA Terms of Reference last year (ToR) and a period of public consultation to gather further input from the public, the ToR was finalised, and the EIA study was started in July 2023.

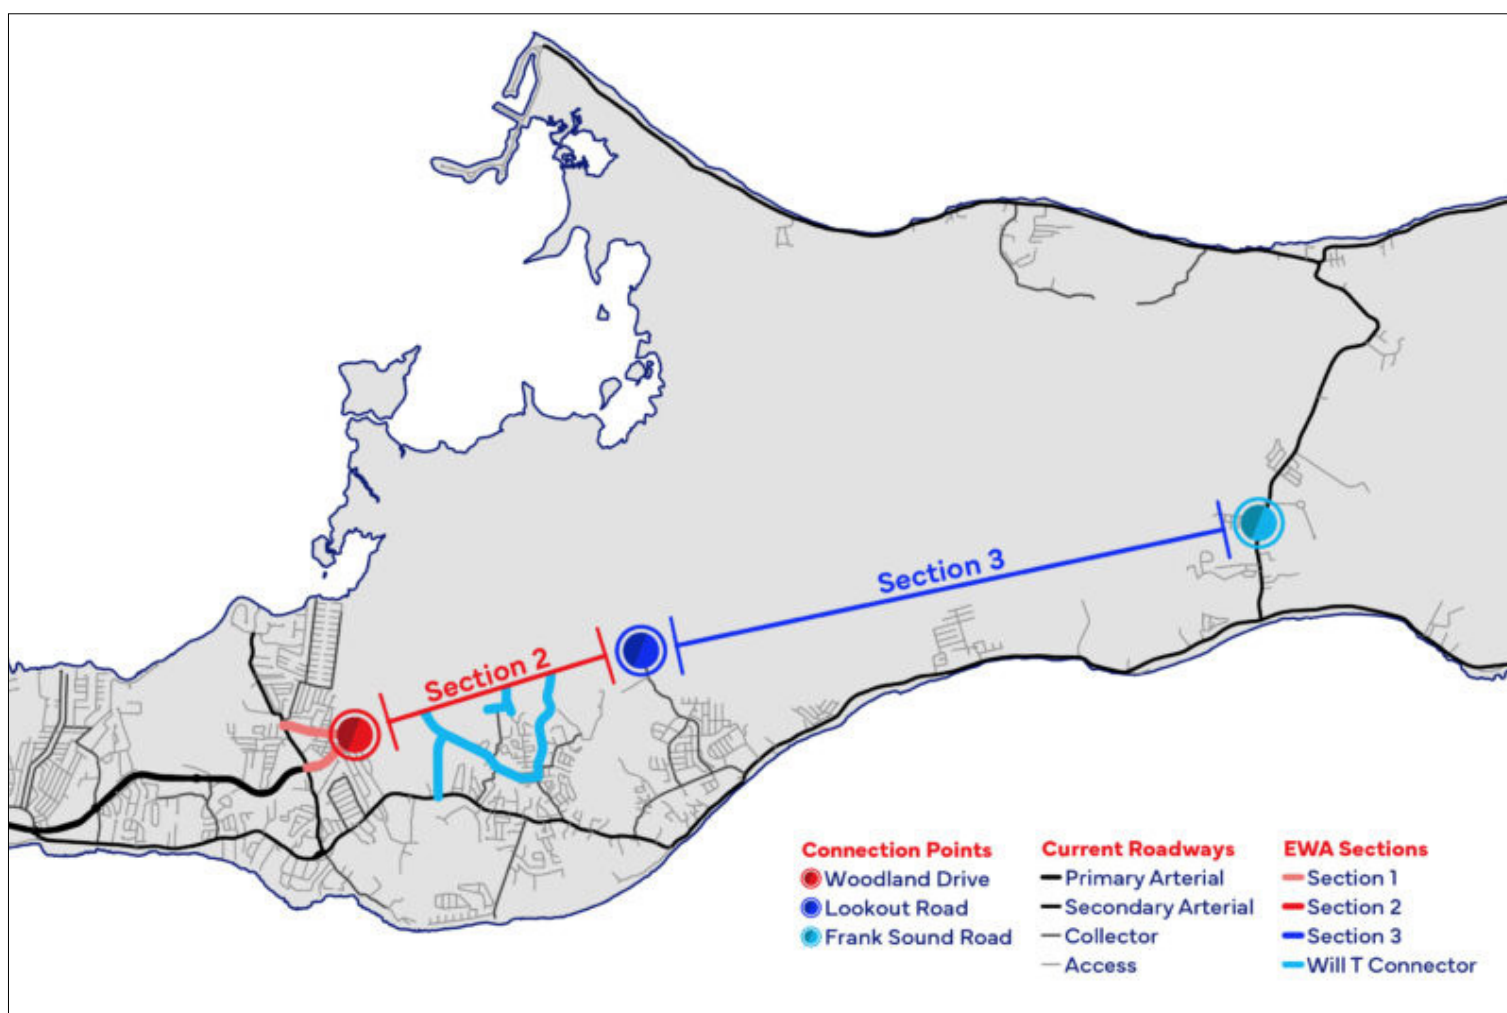

Input from the public during the consultation period part of the EWA EIA Terms Reference (ToR) and a series of other public meetings, showed a need for accurate and fact-based information on the study. The new 'Your EIA in action' website aims to inform the public about the EIA study and dispel misinformation on what it is studying and why. It will also act as the portal for regular updates on the EIA as work progresses on it.

Mr. Howard further commented on the value the website brings to the public, "The new website resource is important because it was very clear that the general public wanted more and accurate information on the EIA and what it is looking at. The website explains the EIA process, what it is studying and shows the work in progress."

"Visitors to the website can get a clear understanding of the numerous areas of study that are being evaluated including, 'Cultural and Natural Heritage', 'Socio-economic impact', 'Noise and vibration' and 'Transport and mobility'. These are things that impact all Caymanians and residents so, it's important for people to fully understand what is being studied and why."

Additional information on a variety of topics will continue to be added to the website as the studies progress.

Members of the public can access the 'Your EIA in action' website at <https://youreia.cayman-roads.com/> and by following NRA social media channels.

JA companies showcase their products at the Agriculture Show

► Beaded and Braided

Six Junior Achievement (JA) companies showcased their unique products at the Cayman Agricultural Show, on Wednesday 14 February. It was a great experience for all the high school students who had learned the importance of working together in teams to market and sell their products. But it was also good news for visitors to the show who were looking for some special and unusual gifts to give to their loved ones:

"At the moment we are doing flowers for Valentine's Day," said Jenese Simms President of 'Crafted' which makes beautiful flowers out of wire. "We have different bundles at different prices, as well as Caymanite pieces and larger decorative pieces. Our cheapest is a single flower for three dollars and the price range moves up to a bouquet for ten dollars," Jenese continued. "I think the biggest thing that we've learned is how to work professionally and that is very important. Being part of this JA company is developing that professional presence in the office while working together and having a great time creating a product."

rienced business advisors who volunteer to guide the students. Around 12 students, aged between 15 to 18, form the companies, creatively using their talents to form teams that create, market, and sell unique products.

Michael McKogg 15, said: "We are the Junior Achievement Company from Brac, and our company name is 'On Da Brac.' We are selling some tumblers, some mugs, and some bracelets. I have learned that working together is always better than working alone."

Another JA company, 'Cutting Edge,' has come up with a brilliant idea for recycling, as 16-year-old Cassie Johnson explained: "We are a Junior Achievement company that is sponsored by Cayman Airways, and we make products from recycled pallets that we collect from businesses around the island. What we do with these pallets is sand them down, pull them apart, and make them into signs, trays, and shelves. What I've learned most of all is the importance of teamwork. We have been able to collaborate as a group, communicate ideas, and make a creative product."

In the afternoon, three more JA companies set up their tables at the show. "Beaded and Braided," makes beautiful and unique jewelry, while Prop-A-Plant" is a company focusing on plant propagation, and "Interlocked," makes beautifully original jewelry holders.

If you would like to support JA by volunteering or through sponsorship opportunities, then contact Swan Sandoval at the Chamber 743-9124 swan.sandoval@caymanchamber.ky or visit the JA Cayman website: <https://www.jacayman.ky/>

Church Screening Event with Cayman Heart Foundation Identifies Significant Potential Heart Disease

Approximately 14.5% of those screened were flagged for further evaluation

The Cayman Heart Foundation (CHF) continues to make strides in promoting heart health awareness and providing crucial screenings to the community. On 25 February 2024, the CHF conducted cardiac health screenings at a health fair organized by the Savannah Seventh Day Adventist Church, reaffirming its commitment to the well-being of people in the Cayman Islands.

Facilitated by a team of dedicated health professionals, a total of 69 individuals participated in the heart health screening event. Among them, 10 individuals, representing approximately 14.5% of those screened, were flagged for further evaluation, emphasizing the importance of early detection and intervention in managing cardiac health.

Earlier this month the CHF opened a community health centre at 10 Pasadora Place, Smith Road in George Town, where anyone can receive complimentary cardiac health screenings. Since its opening, 10 individuals have benefited from screenings, underscoring the foundation's dedication to ensuring access to essential healthcare services for all. During the screenings, those over 16 will undergo assessments for weight and BMI, blood pressure, cholesterol, glucose levels, and consultations with healthcare professionals.

"Our mission at the Cayman Heart Foundation goes beyond just providing screenings; it's about empowering individuals to take charge of their heart health," said Maureen Cubbon, board chairperson of the Cayman Heart Foundation. "Through our community centre and programs, we aim to create a culture of proactive cardiac care and support."

As Heart Month draws to a close, the Cayman Heart Foundation reiterates its unwavering commitment to enhancing cardiovascular health across the region. Beyond February, CHF remains dedicated to its mission of educating the public, influencing policy, and facilitating access to high-quality care through a diverse range of programs and initiatives.

Individuals interested in scheduling a free cardiac health screening at the CHF community centre can make an appointment by emailing admin@caymanheartfund.com or calling 746-1490.

Crime in the Cayman Islands

The recent surge in gun crimes in the Cayman Islands in the past few years has left residents shaken and concerned for their safety. The once peaceful and idyllic setting of the islands is slowly being eroded by the rising incidents of gun violence, leaving many to question the security and stability of our islands.

In the past few years, there have been numerous instances of gun-related crimes, including shootings, armed robberies, and gang-related violence. These incidents have not only caused fear and anxiety within the community but have also strained the resources of law enforcement as they struggle to address the growing threat of violent crime.

The recent shooting at a local football match, which left seven people injured, marks the worst shooting event in the history of the Cayman Islands. This senseless act of violence has shocked the community and raised serious concerns about the safety of public gatherings and events on the islands. It is evident that the once safe and secure environment of the Cayman Islands is slowly becoming a thing of the past.

It is clear that immediate and decisive action needs to be taken to address the escalating gun violence in the Cayman Islands. Law enforcement agencies must be given the necessary resources and support to tackle the roots of gun-related crimes, including addressing gang activity, illegal firearms trafficking, and social issues that contribute to violence. In addition, community-based initiatives, such as youth outreach programs and violence prevention efforts, should be strengthened to address the underlying factors that lead to gun violence and many other issues our youths are faced with.

The recent shootings in the Cayman Islands serve as a wake-up call for authorities and the community to come together to find effective solutions to curb the rising tide of gun crimes. Failure to act swiftly and decisively will only result in further tragedies and erode the once peaceful reputation of the islands. It is crucial that steps are taken to restore the sense of safety and security for all residents and visitors of the Cayman Islands.

Reclaiming Peace: A Response to Rising Crime

Several days have passed since the horrific shooting incident at the Ed Bush Sports Field. The shock that ripped through our islands was palpable, understandable, and shared by us all.

Before the shock diminishes in the days to come, we should reflect on what lessons we can draw.

In times like these, it's natural to wonder if our peaceful Cayman Islands have been lost to violence. Let me reassure you: I firmly believe that our Islands retain their essence of peace and safety. We mustn't allow fear and the acts of a few to cloud our perception of the strength, beauty and resilience that define us and our country.

However, we must not let these types of crimes worsen and become the norm in our society. The rise in gun crimes and gang activities demands our attention. It requires action to prevent future shootings and to bring those associated with the recent shooting to justice. The Police

► Hon Roy McTaggart

Commissioner has assured the community that we will see action, and he and the RCIPS have our complete confidence and support.

We must tackle the underlying causes of this violence head-on, as neglecting them could exacerbate these incidents. Similar to many countries, we grapple with social issues within our community that demand our attention.

We know that some of our youth encounter personal challenges that lead them towards gangs and criminal paths.

We must show our young people the countless positive opportunities our islands offer. To achieve this, we must unite, focusing our strengths on confronting these varied social challenges head-on.

Moreover, we must equip law enforcement agencies with the latest technology and strategies to effectively combat gang activities. Collaboration amongst the various government agencies is also essential to crafting a holistic approach to tackling these complex social issues.

Over the past year, the Opposition has spoken out often on community safety and we provided common sense recommendations that the Government should prioritise.

I thank the Premier for her strong stand and assurances that the RCIPS will have the resources to solve this case and make our communities even safer.

However, words alone are not enough. Action is absolutely needed. The Government must prioritise the issues of at-risk youth and gang disruption and provide the RCIPS with the resources necessary to revitalise Community Policing and strengthen capacity. We will support the Government when we see progress and remind them to act when we see none.

Before I conclude, On behalf of the Progressives Opposition, I again extend heartfelt condolences to the victims and families of the recent shooting. We pray for their healing and the healing of our community from the fear caused by a few.

May God continue to bless our beautiful Cayman Islands.
