Thatch Roofs & Ironwood Posts is a new exhibition currently on show at the National Gallery of the Cayman Islands that will run until 12th July. The exhibition showcases the 'Art & Artistry of the Caymanian Home' and, in doing so, it probes the heritage of the islands through architectural design, while at the same time questioning what the future is bringing for Cayman in terms of development and design.

Cayman's New National Symbols

The Publisher,
The Cayman Times.

I write to correct the error in the Ministry of Youth, Sports and Heritage's announcement declaring turtle as the national dish of the Cayman Islands. Turtle although a popular dish, was not as widely available as we are led to believe, and therefore could not have been "national".

By the time the modern Cayman Islands came into existence turtle had long been extinct in the waters surrounding the Cayman Islands. As a matter of fact, turtles were even extinct in the waters between Cayman and the south coast of Cuba, where Caymanians fished after depleting supplies in our own waters. During its peak the turtle trade brought wealth to several, Caymanian entrepreneurs and for years there was a brisk trade in turtle between Grand Cayman, Key West and Tampa, Florida.

Caymanian turtle fishermen, having 'fished out' the surrounding waters then resorted to poaching turtle from waters surrounding the Miskito Cays. These Cays were territory claimed by Nicaragua. For most of the time Caymanian turtle fishermen successfully poached turtle in these waters but there were numerous occasions where Caymanian vessels were seized, and the crew imprisoned by the Nicaraguan authorities. Such incidents often necessitated the diplomatic intervention of the United Kingdom acting in the interests of the Caymanian fishermen. As Nicaragua complained of these incidents, pressure to discontinue the trade weighed upon the Caymanian fishermen and this pressure as well as a growing call for a ban of the trade brought a clamour for some alternate supply.

► J.A. Roy Bodden

Some years before the eventual CITES ban in the 1970's Cayman fishermen were able to procure limited licences from the Nicaraguan authorities to fish for turtle at certain intervals. Then after the Falklands War at the Convention on Trade in Endangered Species (CITES) was held in Argentina, The Convention declared turtles an endangered species and imposed a worldwide ban on the trade.

To their credit, the Caymanian authorities had some years prior encouraged a group of foreign investors to pursue the experiment of rearing turtles in artificial conditions. This venture enjoyed modest success and although it demonstrated modest success, the worldwide ban stunted its growth, and we know well its current challenges. The experiment has never been able to meet the demand of the Caymanian market.

Turtle as a staple food, even before the ban was not widely available on Grand Cayman during all times. And even when it was available, it was most easily procured in George Town or West Bay. In West Bay because that district produced the majority of persons involved in all aspects of the trade from mariners to ship owners and financiers.

George Town as well, had its share of those who, participated in the turtle trade, from entrepreneurs like the late Dr. Roy McTaggart, owner of a number of turtle schooners, including the now infamous Majestic. George Town also produced legendary turtle butchers like the late Lorraine Russell. Older generations of Caymanians will no doubt be able to recall the nights at the 'Old Market' where the turtles were butchered and sold. At such times, that venue was a veritable temple for the "Who was Who" among Caymanian men. It was a conclave rich with Caymanian culture and tradition as men like the late Ashley Godfrey, Neville Ebanks and their contemporaries would 'hold court' for hours on end.

For a brief time during the heyday of turtling the Cayman Islands Government operated a canning factory specialising in the production of turtle soup. This venture, for all its promise did not reach its full potential ... the result... a lack of a steady supply of turtle.

Of significance also, is the fact that history suggests that the turtle trade was not significant in the lives of the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman as it appears to have been for those on Grand Cayman.

The popular dish throughout the Cayman Islands was and still is the "Cayman stew" or what folks nowadays call "run down". This dish, the ingredients of which was widely popular, even to the Seventh Day Adventists who did not eat turtle. This stew or "run down" was made with coconut milk, the 'breadkind' being cassava, sweet potatoes, bottlers, yam breadfruit all in one pot with fish or salt beef providing the protein.

It was a dish available and popular among folk from all walks of life. It was not dependent upon the turtle schooner's arrival from the Miskiti Cays, nor was it hampered by bad weather.

The Ministry of Culture is correct in naming swanky as the national drink, accompanying the (run down) fish or salt beef stew.

NEW ECONOMIC REPORT CHALLENGES THE STATUS QUO

By Staff Writer

A new economic report looking at the challenges and opportunities facing Cayman has come in for intense scrutiny in the past few weeks with a range of opinions on either side of the spectrum.

The report titled Unleashing Cayman's Potential: A Journey to Prosperity and Unity was researched and written by prominent Caribbean economist Marla Dukharan.

The new report focuses on the economy broadly, and addresses specifically the sectors of tourism, financial services, and construction. It also deals with issues surrounding employment and inequality.

But the assertions on tourism have jumped to the forefront of local reaction, including criticism by the Hon. Minister for Tourism, Kenneth Bryan.

In the report, Ms Dukharan stated that tourism is a heavily import-dependent sector in the Cayman Islands - more so than the rest of the Caribbean, based on the largely-foreign workforce in tourism.

"But has anyone ever looked at the data to analyze whether there is any truth to these widely held beliefs that tourism and financial services are the twin pillars driving the Cayman economy and that construction is needed to create growth? And if not, why not?" she queries.

Against that background, her analysis raises several questions for Cayman's policy-makers to address.

It states that the Cayman Islands is the only country in the Caribbean that consistently shows a net outflow of remittances, as foreign workers send a portion of their wages back home. Ms Dukharan says this net outflow of remittances "constitutes a drain on the Cayman Islands economy, just like imports."

She cautions that "if Cayman continues growing the tourism sector, which requires more and more physical space, more hotels, bringing in more and more people, and generating more and more waste and pollution, we risk jeopardizing the very culture and natural environment which are the only major domestic input into the tourism sector."

The economist also raises the question: What about the impact that tourism has

on the amount of revenue the Government earns and can therefore spend in the economy?

According to her, "While we have found no official data published on the revenue generated from Work Permits granted to the tourism sector specifically, the Tourism Accommodation and Cruise Ship Departure charges amount to less than 3% of Government Revenues."

The Hon. Minister for Tourism Kenneth Bryan has taken exception to the report's conclusions on tourism declaring that "her analysis on the lack of contribution to our government revenues is unfortunately slanted."

"Who asked her to do it, who paid her to do it?" Mr Bryan asked during an interview on Radio Cayman's For The Record programme with Orrett Connor.

He further questioned what he felt are political insinuations within the report where it says in part: "It is especially important in the year ahead of an election, to make sure Caymanians understand how the economy works and what actually are the problems you need to resolve, so you can make the best decisions possible when you head to the polls."

Mr Bryan termed that "highly inappropriate to get into our local politics" adding that he would be addressing the matter further in Parliament.

In responding to the concerns raised, economist Marla Dukharan affirmed that this report is an independent in-house document produced solely by her company as part of a regular series of economic perspectives and analyses not only on Cayman but other countries.

Speaking on the Radio Cayman programme Talk Today with Sterling Dwayne Ebanks, she viewed some of the reactions "as an attempt to discredit the analysis and the findings."

"I would say categorically that nobody paid me to write this report. It was funded entirely independently by me. And the fact is that I've been covering the Cayman Islands economy for the past 12 years or so...people like me need to say what needs to be said irrespective of who might not like it."

While the section on tourism has jumped to the forefront of comment and reaction, Unleashing Cayman's Potential: A Journey to Prosperity and Unity also addresses other areas.

Comparatively, it places the financial services sector as the bedrock of the economy having an impact on the tourism sector as well. It asserts that without the license fees paid by the financial services sector, the Government will generate a fiscal deficit every year, and will have to borrow to pay its bills.

"The financial services sector therefore, in effect, subsidizes everything else in the economy - including tourism...So - tourism isn't quite the goose laying the golden egg that many believe it is, and I think it is safe to say that while financial services is producing a bounty of golden eggs, these are really the only solid eggs in Cayman's basket. And this makes Cayman fiscally and economically vulnerable (not unlike the rest of the Caribbean)."

Under the heading of 'WORK' it credits the labour force participation rate in Cayman as "probably the highest in the region, which means there is less idleness and less informality in the economy - all of which is positive...Cayman is the only country in the region where unemployment is not a problem."

However, the report sounds a note of caution regarding the link between employment and education in Cayman: "Only 27% of students in Government primary schools and 37.5% at Government secondary schools are achieving the expected standards in their education. This is at odds with a country of Cayman's GDP per capita and the level of fiscal spending on education. It suggests that Cayman will likely have to continue to outsource its most highly paid and highly sought after jobs for the foreseeable future."

It also said that a skills-gap analysis has not yet been conducted in Cayman which would tell the specific skills employers need versus the existing skill-set of the Caymanian workforce.

And while the construction sector is highlighted as "a major growth driver in Cayman", the Dukharan report asks: "Why then does Cayman seem to have a long-standing affordable housing problem?"

Unleashing Cayman's Potential: A Journey to Prosperity and Unity also touches on issues of inequality within the economy and society. "Regrettably, we do not have any data beyond 2015 on inequality in Cayman. This puts Cayman's policy-makers and nation builders at a significant disadvantage in addressing inequality, and there has been no meaningful improvement in inequality since 2007."

Missing Teen: Shantelle Rhoden Aguilar Remains Outstanding

Fifteen-year-old Shantelle Rhoden Aguilar was reported missing on Friday, 15 March. She was last seen at her home address in George Town, and remains outstanding.

She is of brown complexion and slim build, with dark brown hair, and wears glasses. She was last seen wearing a grey shirt and black leggings. A picture of Shantelle is attached.

Members of the public are encouraged not to harbour Shantelle and other missing teens, but instead to call the 911 immediately if she is seen, for her own safety.

The RCIPS is reminding the public that anyone who harbours or conceals a young person, is guilty of an offense and is liable, on conviction, to being fined $2000 and to imprisonment for three months. Anyone with information on his whereabouts is encouraged to call the George Town Police Station at 949-4222 or the M.A.S.H Unit at 649-6000.

Police Investigate Credit Card Fraud, Three Men Arrested

Police are investigating multiple instances of credit card fraud, where persons have made purchases using credit card details which have been obtained fraudulently, without knowledge or consent of the cardholders.

At times these purchases have been made over the phone or online, however police have recently seen a number of instances where the culprits have made purchases in person without providing a physical card or identification.

On Tuesday, 19 March 2024, officers arrested three men, ages 32, 32, and 33, who are visitors to the island, on suspicion of obtaining property by deception, after the men had earlier purchased several items with card information from multiple cards, which appears to have been fraudulently obtained. Police also conducted a search of the premises where the men were located, and seized several items, including phones, computer items, perfumes and expensive jewellery, which are suspected to have been obtained by the same method.

The men remain in custody as investigations continue.

Businesses which have conducted transactions with manually entered card details since 16 March, particularly involving a group of three American men, two of whom are of dark complexion, one of light complexion, are asked to review these transactions and contact the RCIPS Financial Crime Investigation Unit at RCIPS.FCU@rcips.ky if they have any suspicions.

The RCIPS is taking the opportunity to advise the public and businesses of the steps that can be taken to help avoid becoming victims of this type of fraud.

Members of the public should remember to never share card details or your PIN with others, always keep your cards in sight when making payments, and otherwise out of sight of other persons.

It's also important to monitor your account for payments you don't recognise. If possible, take advantage of transaction alerts provided through email or a bank approved app. This way, if you see a card payment you do not recognise, you can report it immediately to your bank.

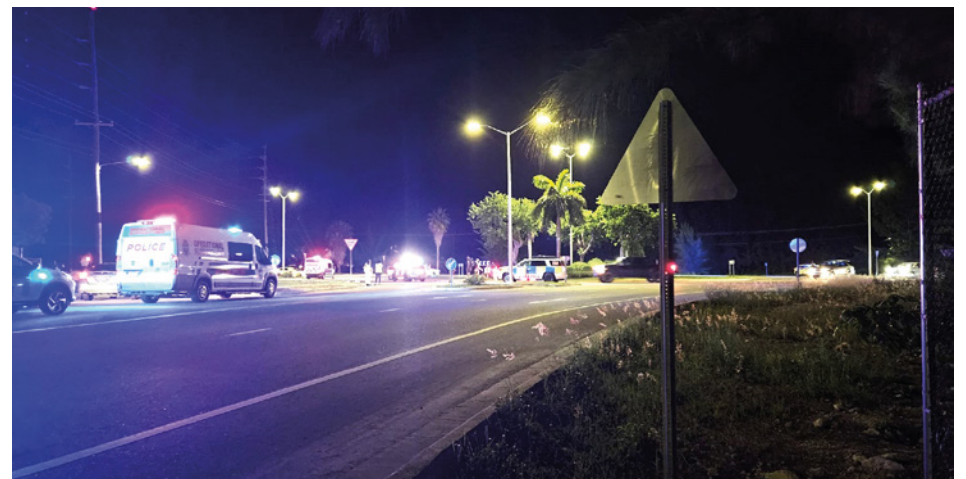

Finally, persons should avoid, as best as possible, making payments with your card via phone. Instead, remote payments should be done through secure recognisable platforms.

Businesses should avoid conducting card transactions when persons are unable to produce the physical card with matching identification.

Additionally, businesses may want to consider not conducting card transactions over the phone, since a physical card cannot be provided in these cases.

If you suspect you have been a victim of credit card fraud, contact the RCIPS at 949-4222, or by dialing 9-1-1.

Police Commence 2024 Road Safety Operations with Easter Holiday Campaign

The Easter holiday period has traditionally been a time of increased roading activity across the islands. The RCIPS has chosen the upcoming Easter holiday period to kick off the first of what will be a number of targeted road safety campaigns over the course of the year, that aim to reduce serious injury and fatalities on our roads. These operations are being conducted in conjunction with the National Road Safety Strategy, 'Safe Roads, Safe Cayman: The Road to Zero.'

Commencing Friday, 22 March, through to Friday 5 April, RCIPS will be conducting high visibility policing initiatives and traffic enforcement across the islands, focusing on persistent road safety offences and poor driving behaviours, including speeding, DUI, inconsiderate and distracted driving.

While police focus on these primary road safety offences, the campaign will have a wider reach, including partner agencies such as DVDL and the Public Transport Dept, who will be targeting un-road-worthy vehicles and un-safe loads.

"We know Easter is a special time of year, here in the Cayman Islands, where families and friends come together, commuting from district to district to socialize, while visitor numbers are up", says Chief Superintendent

Brad Ebanks. "This is why the officers will be out in numbers over this period; proactively focusing on those that demonstrate disregard for the law and endanger other road users. The main objective here is not to prosecute persons, but rather create safer roads for everyone. Motorists tend to do the right thing when they know police officers are out and about."

Policing efforts will target known hot spots and times of day/night where poor driving behavior is most prevalent. "The community can expect to see increased police visibility on the roads over the length of the campaign", says Inspector Andre Tahal, Head of Traffic and Road Policing. "Ultimately, our enforcement efforts are about keeping our roadways safe. Persons can play their part in supporting police efforts by not drinking and driving, slowing down and being considerate of fellow road users. And passengers, you have a role to play too - call out unsafe driving behavior when you see it".

RCIPS continues its commitment to promoting road safety, especially during periods of increased road activity, as we work with our partners in government to support the National Road Safety Strategy.

Police Respond to MVA Fatal in Bodden Town

Shortly before 2:30AM, Thursday, 21 March, police and other emergency services responded to a report of a collision in the vicinity of the junction of Bodden Town Road and Anton Bodden Drive.

Initial investigations indicate that the vehicle was travelling west along Bodden Town Road when it left the roadway and collided with a tree.

The male occupant of the vehicle sustained serious injuries and was transferred to the Cayman Islands Hospital by ambulance. He subsequently succumbed to his injuries and was pronounced deceased by the attending doctor.

The RCIPS expresses its condolences to the family and friends of the deceased.

Kirk Home Centre Sponsors TechCayman's Machine Learning Robotics Camp, Empowering Youth in STEM Education

TechCayman's Machine Learning Robotics Camp, a two-day immersive weekend program focused on STEM learning, continues to inspire and educate Cayman's youth. Sponsored by TechCayman, the camp provides an invaluable opportunity for young minds to explore the exciting world of technology. The camp has also received support from Kirk Home Centre, further enhancing its impact and reach in the community. This marks the fourth time Kirk Home Centre has sponsored TechCayman's Machine Learning Robotics camp.

Brigitte Shaughness, General Manager at Kirk Home Centre, expressed the company's commitment to supporting youth education and technological advancement. "Kirk Home Centre focuses charitable donations mainly on school-aged children and the elderly. However, our support for young children's education did not include a tech component so teaming up with TechCayman was the perfect fit for us," she said. "The TechCayman Robotics Camp provides an introduction to robotics for the children who attend, which brings out their creativity and imagination and prepares them for a rapidly changing world."

The sponsorship from Kirk Home Centre extends beyond financial assistance, with the company also providing logistical support to ensure the success of the Machine Learning Robotics Camp. This collaboration underscores Kirk Home Centre's dedication to empowering youth with the tools and knowledge they need to thrive in an increasingly digital landscape.

Andrew Armstrong, IT Manager at Kirk Home Centre and a mentor at the Machine Learning Robotics Camp, shared his insights into the transformative experience of mentoring young participants. "It is a pleasure to mentor the students who are excited to learn about the tech field in a hands-on learning environment," he said. "It is especially rewarding to see how eager they are to learn more about technology and how it introduces ideas for possible future careers."

Andrew emphasized the importance of fostering a supportive and collaborative environment where participants feel encouraged to explore, ask questions, and make mistakes. He highlighted the enthusiasm and creativity that participants bring to the table, underscoring the profound impact of mentorship in nurturing their growth and confidence.

"Working as a robotics mentor has been an incredibly enriching experience," Andrew continued. "It's a privilege to play a role in shaping the next generation of innovators and problem-solvers, and I look forward to continuing to inspire and support them in their robotics journey."

Through Kirk Home Centre's generous support, they are helping to empower youth with the skills and knowledge they need to succeed in the digital age.

Adventist Youth donate more than 40 pairs of glasses to the Lions Club

More than 40 pairs of glasses were collected, sanitized and donated to the Lions Club of Grand Cayman as part of the Global Youth Day Activities. These glasses will help the club offer free eyewear to those in need who can't afford it.

All sixteen Seventh-day Adventist churches across Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac and students from Cayman Academy participated in "Show Up in the City" Global Youth Day (GYD), March 16, 2024. Youth in custom GYD t-shirts donning blue, purple, and yellow flooded the streets of George Town, distributing books, personalized water bottles bearing John 4:14 "But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst...", extending invitations to the upcoming "Reset" campaign, praying for and encouraging citizens, presenting certificates of appreciation to the country's emergency response teams, and handing over used test glasses to the Lions Club of Cayman that will be recycled for the less fortunate in and out of the Cayman Islands.

At the handing over of the glasses, Lion Brian Barnes expressed thank you on behalf of the Lions Club and commended all present for taking this kind of interest in their community.

In Cayman Brac, there was a Motorcade from east of the islands beginning at Spot Bay Community Park to the west side, ending at the Brac Reef Resort. Along the way youth stopped at various locations to do praise and worship, a mini motivational encouraging word, book distribution and prayer for the community. Some of the stops included the KCC Rest Home (Elderly Home) and the bustling Kirkconell's Supermarket.

In George Town, despite the rain the youth actively engaged in activities. One young person reflected, "God allowed the rain to catch us at the bank because there was someone He wanted us to encounter".

Surprisingly, they encountered at least three persons while waiting for the rain to stop. The youth demonstrated resilience and a keen desire for ministry, extending their outreach even after the rain ceased, impacting visitors arriving via cruise ships. "They expressed they did not have the time to stop but took the books and invitations".

Upon returning from the walk, individuals shared their experiences from various impacted areas

"It was great. We had fun sharing the word". "People were receptive and respectful". "The youth seem to be happier being in the street. I saw this in how persistent they were"- Markino Fearon (Ps. Mark).

"As a church, we need to move away from the traditional worship and go out into the communities more"- Davian.

"I have seen the product of the implementation of faith and learning through the school (Cayman Academy). I think the idea of allowing the children to pray in class has caused them to not shy away from praying in public or to offer a word of encouragement". - Shirlette Facey.

"I was happy to see even people in moving vehicles stopped to hear us and accept what we were giving out. For those who were not home we were able to leave their invitation at their door/mailbox" - Blackmore.

There was widespread praise from community members, youths, and law enforcement for the event's impact. Youth Ministries Director of the Cayman Islands Conference of Seventh-day Adventists Mrs. Merl Watkins expressed immense joy at witnessing the "authenticity of youth in sharing their faith", emphasizing the event's aim to "provide hope to the fearful and fallen". She underscored the role of "Adventist youth in serving others and encouraged them to embrace their faith unashamedly, making Global Youth Day activities a part of their lifestyle".

In George Town, the day concluded with a road march from Kirk Supermarket to Flow Cayman (Eastern Avenue), with an evening of worship and a presentation by Ministerial Intern Roshé Riley marking the launch of Youth Week of Prayer. In Cayman Brac, the youth gathered at the Layman E. Scott Sr. High School for an Evening of Music and Drama - Modern day Prodigal Son.

Further engagement await the youth, including the continuation of Youth Week of Prayer at Coe Beach on Sunday, March 17, 2024, and virtually throughout the week. The Youth Week of Prayer will culminate on Sabbath, March 23, 2024, with a Homecoming event titled "When Jesus Shows Up" at the Northside Civic Centre, featuring Union Youth Director Pastor Tarry Tanis as the speaker.

The show is made up of artwork primarily from the National Collection held at the National Gallery, along with new work on loan from several leading artists and collectors. In addition, the Gallery has worked with local architect John Doak to feature his renderings of the four distinct styles of Caymanian early homes and their evolution. John's book, Cayman Style, is also available for purchase at the Gallery and is a treasure trove of information on the field of domestic architecture, detailing his extensive research on the subject.

National Gallery Collections Curator William Helfrecht said the exhibition was timely given the current discussions in Cayman about the scale and pace of development, and the lack of legislation around preservation of historic homes.

"The exhibition emphasizes the unique architectural heritage of our Islands and the need to pro-actively preserve the built heritage that remains. It seeks to raise awareness about the complexity of historic preservation and to shed light on the stakeholders who are invested in this area, such as the National Trust, who we work very closely, with and also the government," he advised. "The loss of notable historic buildings that have been demolished over the past couple of years has really thrown a spotlight on this urgent issue."

The Gallery hoped that the exhibition will help to increase visibility around the urgency of the topic, as well as to shed a balanced view in terms of the surrounding issues.

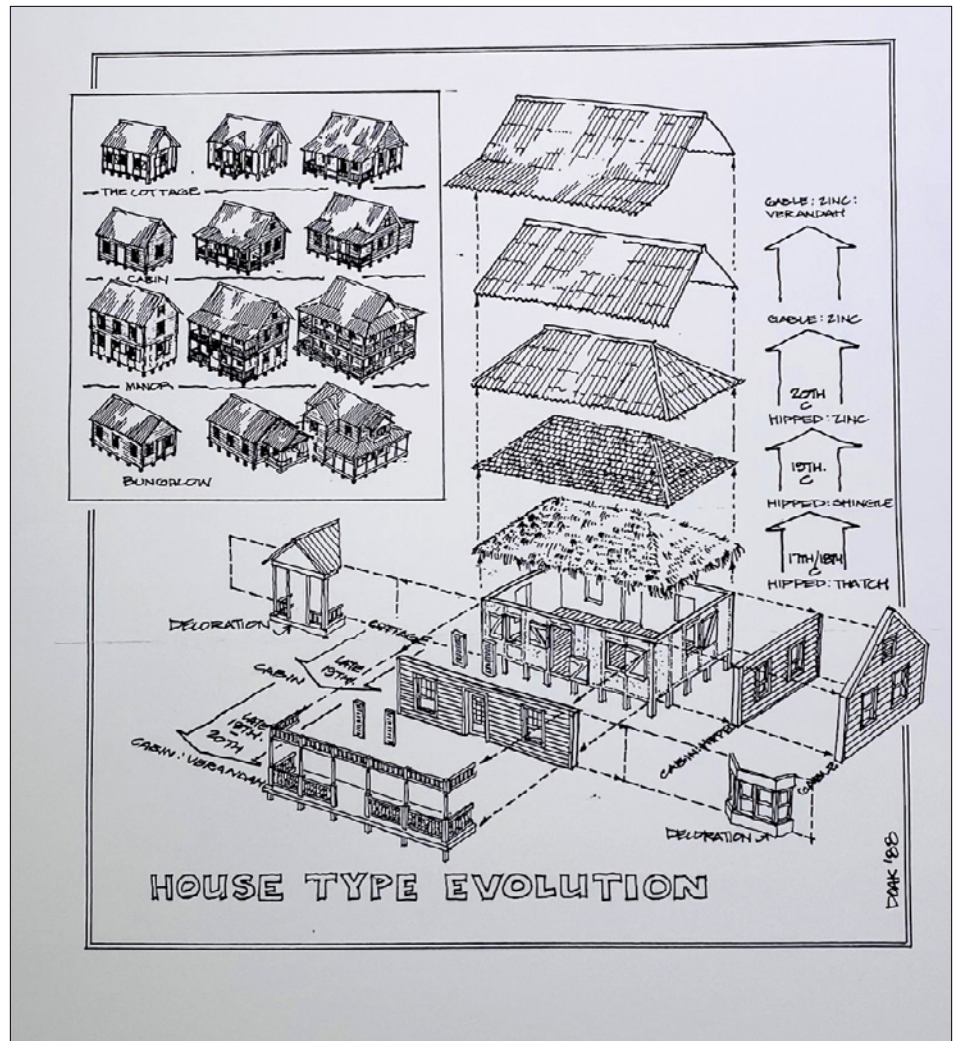

"There are a lot of families who inherit a historic property and the costs is exorbitant if you've got a property riddled with termites you might want to with the best intentions try and restore something - it's about having the expertise, access to funding and the materials," Will said.

It is anticipated that the exhibition and subsequent educational forums that will accompany it will give people a real insight into the what is needed to protect and preserve Cayman's historic properties.

"Our Curatorial Team and Education Department have collaborated in the development of this project and, as with many National Gallery exhibition projects, it is conceived as a forum for dialogue and learning. The accompanying programme is as central as the actual artworks on display," Will confirmed.

Architect John Doak's research has been key to the show, which begins with what Will describes as "more literal architectural drawings of quintessential archetypal domestic structures" by the architect.

The drawings are reproductions of John's original drawings. They depict John's classification of four basic designs of a Caymanian house. Some of the drawings are generic and some are of real properties (whether they are standing or not), the first being the wattle and daub cottage, a basic structure that goes back to the 1700s made from wattle and daub with a silver thatch roof. Later, the Cayman Cabin is a variation of the first design, an evolution employing ironwood posts, and, from about the 1920s, with corrugated roofing. The manor house or 'upstairs' house then followed, a two-storey dwelling that is a progression of the cabin form. John Doak's image is of Cousin Mabel's house, a property still in existence at the end of Boggy Sands Road in West Bay, with a gabled roof and stairs which are often configured in different orientations, Will described. This was followed by the bungalow.

"A lot was tied to changes in material," Will explained. "This evolution that John sketches through his history is an evolution of construction techniques and materials. The rise of the bungalow after World War 2 is correlated to the prevalence of concrete as a new material."

For the broader exhibition, the National Gallery has dug deep into its collection for some fascinating artwork from some of Cayman's best-loved artists, including Charles Long, Bendel Hydes, Joanne Sibley, C.E. Whitney and Chris Mann.

Cayman Golf Champions Crowned

The Cayman Islands Amateur Golf Championships presented by Grant Thornton, took place recently at North Sound Golf Club and saw some thrilling finishes with three of the four championship divisions having to go to extra holes before winners were determined.

In the Men’s Championship, a new winner was crowned but only after a tremendous battle did Conor Glynn beat Andrew Jarvis on the fifth hole of a sudden-death play-off when Glynn’s par was sufficient to take home the title after both players had finished the 36-hole tournament at 1 under par totals of 141. Daniel deQuintal finished a further eight shots back in third.

In the Senior Championship, three extra holes were needed to separate Denis Corin who beat defending champion Tim Hepburn after both players had finished with 6 over par totals of 148. Richard Hastings was third, five shots further back.

The Super Senior Championship also required extra holes with Scott Kapuscinski coming out on top over Robert Woods on the second extra hole after both had finished with 8 over par totals of 150. Johan Bjuroe was third, six shots back.

The Ladies’ Championship was more straightforward with Isabel Mendes winning the event with a 12 over par total of 154, 19 shots ahead of Bethany Hawkins with Maria Butler a further three shots back in third.

There were also handicap divisions for the men and the ladies with Hunter Kassam winning the Men’s Handicap division and Manon Guilbard winning the Ladies’ Handicap division.

Cayman Islands Golf Association (“CIGA”) President, Daniel Fortune, remarked on the high standard of golf. “The quality of the golf was exceptional and the level of competition intense. We have seen some new faces win for the first time and also the return to the winner’s enclosure of some past champions as well. The event went exceptionally well, and I offer hearty congratulations to all the winners. As always, none of this is possible without the support from the staff at North Sound and the CIGA committee as well as the very generous support and backing received from our Title Sponsor, Grant Thornton.”

“Huge congratulations to all the winners and to all participants on their strong performance throughout the tournament,” says Greg O’Driscoll, Partner and Head of Asset Management and Business Development at Grant Thornton Cayman Islands. “The Cayman Islands Amateur Golf Championship is one of the major tournaments of the year, and we were delighted to support the event, and to continue our strong partnership with the Cayman Islands Golf Association.”
