Emancipation Day 2025: A Celebration of Freedom and Legacy

Governor praises electoral process

In her statement to Parliament this week, Governor Jane Owen congratulated the voting public for their high turn out to the 30th April general election and also gave praise to those who ran the election so well.

She welcomed the 19 representatives who were voted in by the electorate and said her thoughts were particularly with the newly elected members of Parliament, who were seated in Parliament for the first time.

The Governor was pleased with the entire process, saying: "Since I announced the date of the election back in December, I have observed the democratic path that has brought us to this ceremony in Parliament today. Our General Election was carried out, as is our tradition, in a free, fair and transparent manner, which should make us all proud."

She paid tribute to the Supervisor of Elections, Mr Wes Howell, his Deputies Mrs Sheena Glasgow and Ms Chevala Burke, the over 300 polling staff and volunteers, the police and special constables and many others who, she said, worked so hard to ensure a robust process. She pointed out the extra effort that had been put into getting more people to vote, including the inclusion of mobile and postal voting, which had doubled since the last election, which had facilitated participation for those with reduced mobility, for emergency services, polling staff and for those travelling or living abroad.

Mrs Owen said of the voting public:

► HE Governor Jane Owen

"I would also like to thank the electorate, our people, for taking part and for making your vote count. Collectively you help foster our sense of civil pride."

She said there had been 25,643 registered voters in Cayman – an increase of over 2,000 from the year 2021, and there had been a high voter turnout of 73%, which she termed "impressive" by any international standards.

She concluded by giving a pledge to work with the new government in partnership and trust, respecting the Government's autonomy in domestic affairs, ensuring good governance and the rule of law, the separation of powers, and integrity.

"I will also work with you to fulfil my own responsibilities for internal security in particular, as we protect and promote the security of our population in all areas of national life and work," she said.

She also commended the civil service and said Cayman was fortunate to benefit from a professional and passionate public service.

Mrs Owen said the United Kingdom reinforced its commitment to Cayman as a British Overseas Territory and said she hoped that Members joined her in recognising that this relationship brought significant benefits through the United Kingdom's position within the UN and in many international decision-making bodies in the fields of trade, finance, health, defence, climate and development.

"I believe there is much scope to develop our partnership further as we plan for the future. At a time of global dissonance and friction, it is a good moment to treasure close friends and shared values" the Governor stated.

The Governor closed her remarks by stating that it was a privilege to serve the people of the Cayman Islands.

"Together we have so much to be thankful for. We treasure our islands and everything they stand for. And we treasure each other – including through our different backgrounds, different perspectives, different priorities," she said. "It is often through finding a middle way that we can build a successful future. So, let us today also celebrate that special Cayman Kindness to each other, and the unity that it inspires."

Findings from the International Election Observer Mission from the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association were positive, confirming a robust ballot process and highlighting Cayman's inclusive and welcoming attitude to all voters but she said she hoped the incoming Government would take steps to address some key areas in their reports for future development, including more transparent campaign financing, reviewing constituency boundaries and developing regulations around social media.

With regard to the Referendum, she said the results were clear, although they were not binding, and the Government would have discretion in how it proceeded to develop policies in regard to the three issues.

ELECTIONS OFFICE PRAISED...but some improvements recommended

Part One: Domestic Election Observers

Democracy is alive and well in the Cayman Islands as evidenced in the 2025 general election.

The management of the process has been lauded by the visiting Commonwealth Observer Mission and the Domestic Observer team.

Nonetheless, there were some areas of concern noted by both teams.

In a preliminary statement pending the publication of their final report, the Cayman Islands Domestic Observer team highlighted several areas which they feel warrant attention.

Overall, it concluded that its findings "highlight the efficiency and professionalism displayed by election officials at the majority of polling stations."

Regarding the electoral framework, the independent national team stated: "Observers continue to recommend a legal review of candidacy eligibility, particularly relating to dual nationals and individuals with dated nonviolent convictions to align Caymanian law with international democratic standards."

Under the heading of 'Electoral Integrity' they found no systematic evidence of vote-buying. "Isolated incidents of treating were noted at some rallies but did not constitute direct vote-buying." The recommendations include reinforcing public education against electoral inducements and clarifying the legal definition of 'treating'.

On the overall Political and referendum rallies, it concluded: "Overall, political rallies contributed positively to the democratic process by encouraging public engagement and voter participation." However, it said there were noted gaps in public education and informational resources regarding the referendum questions...highlighting the need for more structured outreach in future referendums. (This point was also separately made by the external observers from the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association).

Commenting on the heading of Media Environment, the Cayman Islands Domestic Observers "noted a significant amount of partisan content on social media platforms during the blackout period highlighting a gap not addressed by the Elections Act (2022 Revision). No major violations involving traditional media were observed."

On the topic of Mobile Voting and Postal Ballots, the team made several recommendations to improve the management of that aspect of the voting process.

Regarding Election Day, it was stated that "polling staff demonstrated strong understanding of the procedures" and commended the Elections Office staff for being "detailed and professional". At the same time, the Domestic Observers put forward further recommendations aimed at making the administrative process work even better. These include ensuring that addresses are accurate and updated, prioritising a complete review of the electoral list before the next election, and improving media publications and signage at the start of the restriction zones. They also recommend ensuring uniformity in procedures in each polling district with clearly defined responsibilities for each poll clerk.

While making note of media reports of alleged inappropriate candidate behaviour at some polling stations, the Domestic Observers said in the absence of evidence, the Elections Office should nonetheless review them.

The Cayman Islands 2025 Domestic Election and Referendum and Observer team comprised Deborah Ebanks (Head of Mission), Nelva Ebanks, Briony Gallegos, Abraham Mathew, Brittany McVicar, Mark Thomas and Valerie Ritch. Alternate observers were Jessica Anderson and Colleen Stoetzel.

ELECTIONS OFFICE PRAISED...but some improvements recommended

Part Two: Commonwealth Observers

Cayman has come in for high praise from the visiting election observer mission from the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association for a robust system underpinning the electoral process run by the Elections Office headed by Supervisor of Elections Wesley Howell.

During a press conference one day following the April 30th general election, the CPA team stated that Cayman "went to the polls in a calm, peaceful and well organized election process."

The delegation said "polling stations were well prepared, staff were trained and knowledgeable and returning and presiding officers showed excellent leadership in dealing with any problems and ensuring eligible voters could cast their ballots."

Head of Mission, Deputy Rob Ward from the States Assembly of Jersey singled out inclusion of people with disabilities as exemplary, noting also that on election day voters were "assisted with dignity and respect" in accordance with the required procedures.

He also highlighted that in the week prior to election day, the opportunity for advanced voting was provided, known as mobile voting, which included visiting voters in their homes to enable them to exercise their democratic rights in a private and inclusive manner. Eligible voters abroad were able to participate in this election through a postal vote.

However, there are some concerns especially surrounding the referendum process, campaign financing and who is eligible to participate in the electoral process.

Regarding the referendum, CPA Head of Mission Ward observed that while it was enabled by the Referendum Act 2025, "that was passed only a few months prior to election day, and is silent on many important matters, such as campaign finance." He also stated that campaigning on the referendum issues was minimal and with activity primarily limited to cruise berthing infrastructure issues.

On the issue of voting rights being tied to Caymanian citizenship many long-term residents are consequently excluded, and candidates must reside in the islands for seven years before nomination. It also noted that a review of constituency boundaries is overdue.

CPA elections analyst Anne Marlborough from Ireland commented: "We certainly have identified some areas in the law that are not entirely ideal. In general, it's quite good. It's quite regulated. But around things like the right to stand for election, there are many qualifications that somebody has to satisfy, and some of these arguably could be dispensed with if one was to attempt to fully vindicate the rights to vote and to stand for election."

Addressing the matter of dual citizenship, she said: "The law is a small bit vague there in that you have to revert to court rulings to really understand whether somebody is qualified to stand for election or not. So it needs to be clear. There really needs to be certainty in the law. That's very important."

That concern also extended to persons imprisoned for more than 12 months who are likewise disqualified from standing for election.

These along with issues surrounding campaign finance transparency will be addressed with recommendations in the final report.

CPA member Alun Davies MS, Member of the Senedd (Welsh Parliament), said one thing which stood out for him was "the kindness of presiding officers and polling clerks helping and enabling people to participate...human kindness, and I think that's something to be commended. Re-counting his experience at a polling station in West Bay, he complimented the counting officers who "took so much care and attention to each individual voter" saying it contributed to transparency of the process.

Those views were echoed by his colleague observer Tim Johnson Member of the House of Keys (MHK), Isle of Man, commenting on what he saw in Cayman Brac

"I really would like to praise the presiding officers and the teams in Brac. I think they did an excellent job. They clearly knew their roles and their responsibilities very clearly, and they executed that really in a really great way...I think that sort of the more general thing that I stood out was there was real pride in the people running the polling stations and it was done correctly. Everybody knew what they were doing."

Describing the overall election as vibrant and peaceful, with diverse media used for campaigning, the CPA mission said it will publish recommendations within two months to enhance the electoral process and democracy in the Cayman Islands.

including Premier Andre Ebanks, Deputy Premier Gary Rutty, and Minister for Culture Isaac Rankine, who delivered a stirring speech before the ceremonial ribbon-cutting.

Rankine declared: "Fellow Caymanians, it is with immense pride that I stand before you today for the official opening of this Emancipation Centre—the first of its kind in the Cayman Islands. But today is more than a ceremonial ribbon cutting; it is a very powerful and permanent declaration that the Caymanian story in its entirety deserves to be told and passed on, and told by us. For far too long, the chapter of slavery in our history has been missing, but the time has come for us to confront, commemorate, and honor that part of our past with truth, dignity, and purpose."

"The Centre stands as a living monument to the men, women, and children whose sacrifices shaped the very soil we walk on today. It is a space of memory, reflection, learning, and healing. It is a sacred space where the story of enslavement, resistance, and eventual freedom is not meant to divide, but to unite us in shared history—and a shared responsibility."

"The theme of this year's commemoration: 'Unity, Strengthening Our Legacy' could not be more fitting, because unity is not the absence of painful truth—it is the embrace of them, together. This Centre is a legacy project for our people; for our youth and for generations as yet unborn. It will serve as an educational resource, a cultural touchstone, and a national reminder that the freedoms we enjoy today were bought with hardship, resilience, and faith."

The celebrations featured heritage displays from West Bay and Bodden Town, craft artisans showcasing traditional silver thatch weaving, and a vibrant main stage with performances culminating in a spectacular fireworks display. Zeta Mae Bodden, of the West Bay Heritage Committee, emphasized the importance of preserving Caymanian culture, stating: "When you get a piece of the Silver Thatch—whether it's a handbag, hat, or piece of rope—we must treasure it, for it is preserving our heritage."

Premier Andre Ebanks echoed the sentiment of cultural preservation, stating: "Cayman has a completely unique emancipation story, and I'm so glad that the celebrations that started last year have rolled on for a second year. Let's continue to honor our culture—tonight and beyond. God bless the Cayman Islands."

As the Cayman Islands continue to embrace their history, the Emancipation Centre stands as a beacon of remembrance, education, and unity—a testament to the resilience and strength of the Caymanian people.

OPPOSITION REPRESENTATION IN PARLIAMENT

A Column by Basil Springer

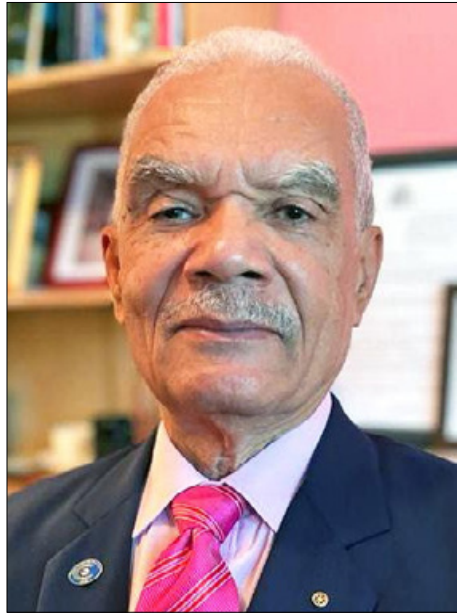

"When governments fear, follow, serve, and obey the Lord, all will be well. When governments disobey and rebel against God's good plans, the hand of the Lord will be against you and your king." – 1 Samuel 12:14-15.

In the pursuit of robust democratic national governance, the role of an opposition party or parties in parliament is paramount. Oppositions act as the people's watchdogs, holding governments accountable, fostering transparency, and amplifying diverse perspectives. However, the electoral system in place significantly influences the efficacy of opposition representation.

This raises a pivotal question for our region: Should we transition from the current First Past the Post (FPTP) system to Proportional Representation to improve the quality of our democracy?

The FPTP system practiced across CARICOM nations except for Guyana, awards parliamentary seats to the candidate who secures the most votes in their constituencies. This method often results in a disproportionate allocation of parliamentary seats compared to the number of votes each party receives.

Two extreme cases come from Barbados, where the 2018 and 2022 elections produced landslide victories for the Barbados Labour Party, despite the party winning only 73.5% and 69.0% of the popular vote, respectively. Such outcomes leave significant portions of the electorate without representation in parliament.

Alternatively, Proportional Representation aims to allocate seats based directly on the percentage of votes each party receives. This system ensures that minority voices are heard and represented, fostering a more inclusive and balanced legislative body.

Under Proportional Representation, the following benefits emerge:

Inclusivity: All political perspectives that gain significant support are represented in parliament. This inclusivity strengthens the democratic fabric by acknowledging the diverse views within the electorate.

Reduced Voter Disenfranchisement: With FPTP, votes for losing candidates often carry no influence, leaving many voters feeling excluded from the process. Proportional Representation ensures that most votes contribute to the election outcome, mitigating the issue.

Collaboration Through Coalitions: Proportional systems often result in coalition governments promoting greater cooperation and consensus-building. This can lead to more balanced and comprehensive policymaking.

Unity Across Regions: FPTP can exacerbate regional divisions by over-representing dominant parties in specific areas. Proportional Representation fosters national unity by giving all regions a meaningful voice in governance.

Critics of Proportional Representation argue that it could lead to fragmented parliaments and unstable governments. While such concerns exist, evidence suggests that proportional systems can, when effectively implemented, produce stable and functional administrations.

The essence of democracy lies in fair

and equitable representation. While FPTP offers simplicity, it often falls short of capturing the diverse views of the electorate. Transitioning toward Proportional Representation could address this gap. It would enhance the legitimacy and effectiveness of our parliamentary democracy by ensuring that all voices are heard and considered in legislative decision-making.

As we contemplate the future of our democratic institutions, we must explore reforms that align with the principles of inclusivity and fairness. Proportional Representation may well be a significant step forward, helping to build a more representative, resilient and equitable democracy for all.

By: CIG Public Relations -

Honourable André Ebanks was yesterday (Tuesday, 6 May 2025) sworn-in as the Premier of the Cayman Islands during a ceremony held at the House of Parliament in George Town, Grand Cayman.

He took the oath of office, administered by Governor Jane Owen, confirming his appointment as the most senior member of the Cabinet. This was followed by Honourable Gary Rutty, who was sworn in as Deputy Premier.

In her speech at the event, Governor Owen underscored her commitment to working with the government stating, "I pledge to work with you in partnership and trust, respecting the Government's autonomy in domestic affairs, ensuring together that we uphold good governance and the rule of law, the separation of powers, and integrity in all we do. I will also work with you to fulfil my own responsibilities for internal security in particular, as we protect and promote the security of our population in all areas of national life and work".

Other members of the Cabinet who were sworn in a separate ceremony outside the precincts of Parliament were Katherine Ebanks-Wilks, Johany Ebanks, Isaac Rankine, Michael Myles, Rolston Anglin, Nickolas DaCosta, along with ex-officio members Deputy Governor Franz Manderson and Attorney General Samuel Bulgin.

During his remarks, Premier Ebanks noted that the National Coalition for Caymanians which he leads will exhibit professional character. "It matters how we show up and carry ourselves in Parliament, it matters how we show up in the Government Admin Building, it matters how you treat someone in the supermarket, it matters how you treat someone in the parking lot, because in this country we respect each other." He further emphasised that the country would bring back values that would make its fore-parents proud.

The Cayman Islands held its general election and referendum on April 30. Nineteen candidates were elected as Members of Parliament across the three islands of Cayman Brac, Little Cayman and Grand Cayman.

One month ahead of the start of the 2025 hurricane season which starts on June 1st, Hazard Management Cayman Islands (HMCI) has launched Preparedness Month 2025, an annual initiative designed to encourage readiness ahead of the Atlantic Hurricane Season.

According to the national disaster management agency, “Building on the success of previous years and recognising the increasing need for preparedness in an era of increasingly unpredictable weather, HMCI has extended this year’s public engagement activities through to 14 June.”

Although the season runs from June 1st to November 30th HMCI reminds all residents that preparedness is not limited to any single month or activity. It advises that every household should maintain a basic emergency kit. (See below)

A projection issued in April by Colorado State University’s tropical forecast team said, “We anticipate an above-average probability for major hurricanes making landfall along the continental United States coastline and in the Caribbean.” They also reminded that “as with all hurricane seasons, coastal residents are reminded that it only takes one hurricane making landfall to make it an active season.”

Thorough preparations should be made every season, regardless of predicted activity, the tropical forecast team reminded.

It’s an important point echoed by HMCI. “With the reality of more frequent and unpredictable weather systems, extending our outreach through June gives residents additional time and support to prepare effectively. Building a culture of readiness is a year-round priority, and every step taken in advance helps strengthen our community’s resilience,” said Mark Codling, HMCI Deputy Director of Preparedness, Planning and Mitigation in a statement launching the May Preparedness Month programme.

19 storms are forecast to form in 2025, nine of which will become hurricanes and four of which will reach Category 3 status or stronger. That’s above the 30-year average tally for both hurricanes and storms. Last year there were 18 named storms, 11 of which became hurricanes and five listed as major hurricanes.

Last July, Hurricane Beryl, image attached, an early season Category 3 storm, swept close to Cayman knocking out some power supplies, causing localised flooding, disrupting water supplies and forcing several hundred people to take precautionary refuge in hurricane shelters. Cayman also felt the effects of some other weather systems which passed through the area.

Throughout the Preparedness Month observance period, HMCI, the Cayman Islands National Weather Service, and key response partners will also be active on local radio to provide timely advice, forecasts, and emergency planning information. Residents are encouraged to download the National Emergency Notification System (NENS) app, and to follow HMCI’s official social media channels for alerts, educational content, and preparedness updates year-round.

Furthermore, residents are advised to follow official channels for weather information.

Recommended basic household emergency kit:

- Sufficient drinking water (1 gallon per person per day for 5–7 days)
- Non-perishable food (5–7 days’ supply)
- Battery-powered or wind-up radio
- Flashlights and extra batteries
- First aid kit and prescription medications
- Personal hygiene items and cleaning supplies
- Important documents stored in waterproof containers
- Fuel and cash on hand
- Supplies for infants, elderly persons, or pets, where applicable

RBC Race for the Kids raises over $30k to benefit Cayman youth

RBC Royal Bank (Cayman) raised over KYD $30,000 to benefit One2One – a non-profit organization dedicated to providing children, youth, and young adults with positive, sustainable mentoring relationships.

Over 700 individuals of all ages, including adults and children, participated in the annual RBC Race for the Kids (RFTK) event on Sunday. The participants enjoyed perfect weather as they ran, jogged, walked or strolled the 5K course, winding through the scenic Camana Bay area in Cayman.

RBC's Area Vice President, Personal & Private Banking and Country Head, Cayman Islands, Khadene Lobban, was thrilled by the community's enthusiasm and the remarkable turnout.

"It's moments like these that make me especially proud to represent RBC," she expressed.

"By making a difference in the communities we live and work in, and partnering with organizations like One2One, we help to create healthy and nurturing environments for our youth. We are demonstrating our commitment to empower youth to reach their full potential," Lobban added.

She went on to say, "I would like to extend a huge heart-felt thank you to all the participants, sponsors, donors and volunteers who made this year's RFTK possible. I look forward to seeing you all there again, next year!"

The funds raised at the Race for the Kids event will help create a positive difference in the lives of young people in Cayman – a place where children, youth and young adults can explore their passions, develop life skills, and build meaningful relationships.

RBC Race for the Kids is a global initiative that brings communities together to run, walk, and wheel in support of youth charities, surpassing $100 million CAD fundraised to-date! Within the Caribbean, these community building races occur in Cayman and Trinidad and Tobago.

A Bright New Chapter for Miss Earth Cayman

After a 15-year hiatus, Miss Earth Cayman Islands has returned — and with it, a renewed sense of purpose, passion, and possibility. This revitalized pageant is more than a celebration of beauty; it's a powerful platform for environmental awareness, community leadership, and the empowerment of young Caymanian women.

Following a thoughtful and lengthy selection process, we are proud to announce Ms. Latecia Bush as Miss Earth Cayman Islands 2025. Latecia brings elegance, heart, and a clear commitment to using her voice for meaningful change. Having previously held the title of Miss World Cayman Islands 2024, her continued journey in pageantry speaks to her dedication and passion for community initiatives. We are thrilled to support her as she embraces this exciting new role.

The return of Miss Earth Cayman Islands marks a fresh start — not just for the pageant franchise, but for the entire community. With a renewed focus on advocacy and impact, this is a moment to celebrate Cayman's next generation of change makers.

We're excited for what's to come and invite everyone to join us in supporting Latecia on her new journey to one of the biggest stages on Earth!

Value in motion

AI, climate change and geopolitical shifts are reconfiguring the global economy. We've mapped where value is moving over the next decade.

• AI adoption could boost global GDP by an additional 15 percentage points by 2035, as global economy is reshaped: PwC Research

• New cross-industry ways of working will allow companies to seize growth opportunities

• To support clients in this new environment, PwC is unveiling a set of actions to help organisations unlock the value of enterprise AI at scale and act on industry insights; as well as a major refresh of its brand

• PwC's new brand identity provides the right platform for the future as technology and other megatrends continue to transform the economy

New research published today by PwC reveals that AI has the potential to boost global economic output by up to 15 percentage points over the next decade. This would effectively add one percentage point to annual growth rates – on par with the growth increment the world began enjoying with 19th century industrialisation.

PwC's report, Value in Motion is based on data-driven scenario analysis which reveals that the global growth dividend from AI is not guaranteed and depends on more than just technical success – it also hinges on responsible deployment, clear governance and public and organisational trust. In other scenarios analysed by PwC, characterised by lower trust and co-operation, the incremental boost to the economy from AI would be more muted at 8%, or in a pessimistic scenario just 1%.

The research finds that rapid reconfiguration of the economy is already under way.

PwC analysis indicates that the pressure for businesses to reinvent themselves is at some of the highest levels seen in the last 25 years across 17 out of 22 global sectors, with US$7.1 trillion in revenues set to shift between companies in 2025 alone, even prior to the recent global increase in tariffs.

PwC's research suggests that over the next decade, industries will reconfigure to meet human needs in new ways, leading to the formation of new 'domains' that cross traditional sector lines. For example, the rise of electric vehicles is bringing electricity providers, battery manufacturers, tech firms and others into the mobility domain, enabling them to create value alongside automobile manufacturers.

Mohamed Kande, Global Chairman, PwC, said:

"As the structure of the economy transforms, value will increasingly come from organisations that can connect the dots across traditional industry boundaries. By focusing on evolving customer needs and using technology to dramatically change the way business operates, business leaders can unlock a step change in growth."

Climate impact

PwC's analysis shows that while AI is set to accelerate growth, the costs of physical climate threats will impose economic constraints. PwC's economic modelling suggests that physical climate risks could leave the global economy nearly 7% smaller in 2035 than it would have been otherwise.

Increased AI adoption is expected to lead to increased energy use by data centres.

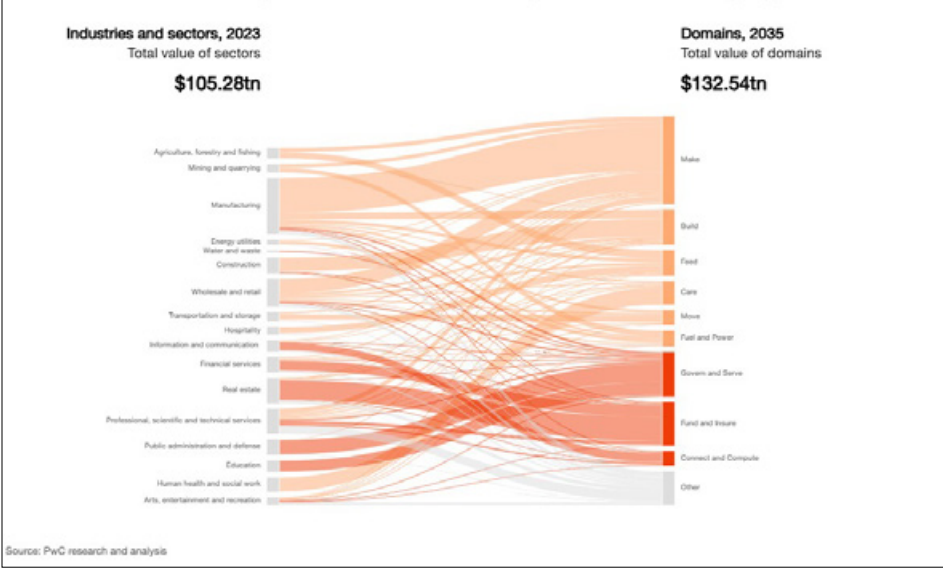

However, modest use of AI to drive energy efficiency could offset this increased use of energy. PwC estimates that the energy use and emissions impact of AI would be neutral if each additional percentage point of AI use led to innovations which cut energy intensity by just 0.1%.

PwC continues to evolve to help clients unlock and protect value

As technology and other megatrends continue to transform the economy, PwC is unveiling a set of actions it is taking to help clients unlock the value of enterprise AI at scale, including:

• PwC's agent OS: PwC's agent OS enables a structural shift in how enterprises can orchestrate AI at scale, seamlessly connecting and scaling intelligent agents into business-ready workflows up to 10x faster than traditional methods. As well as offering this to clients, the network is also leveraging it within its own processes, with hundreds of AI agents deployed for specific tasks integrated into workflows to deliver

As industries reconfigure, new domains of growth are emerging productivity gains across tax, assurance and advisory services to clients.

• AI expertise: Each month, tens of thousands of PwC people are taking part in regularly updated training programmes through the Network AI Academy.

Already, 291,000 PwC partners and staff have taken part in structured AI training.

• New technology alliances: Since the start of December, PwC has unveiled new collaborations with existing alliance partners: AWS, Google Cloud, Microsoft and Oracle. This adds to PwC's existing extensive set of alliance activities, which also includes Adobe, Anthropic, Guidewire, OpenAI, SAP, Salesforce and Workday amongst others.

The network is also extending its ability to rapidly translate industry specific insights into real business model impact for clients, including through a new release of its CIO 100 Award winning GenAI tool, ChatPwC, which now includes a broader range of proprietary data, methodologies and research to give every client team access to the best of PwC's insight.

Value in Motion and other proprietary research is translated into reality by Industry Edge - PwC's portfolio that underpins deep industry insights with supporting business models, processes, technology & data models, and AI accelerators to deliver industry specific transformation.

A new intelligent learning platform has been rolled out across the network. It combines a skills framework, AI powered learning recommendations and a conversational coaching experience into a single, unified and personalised learning experience.

• PwC has also updated its brand, visual and verbal identity to better reflect the role it plays for clients: bringing expertise and technology to help them build, sustain and accelerate momentum. Changes to PwC's visual identity include new imagery and an updated logo with a new 'momentum mark' which signifies how PwC comes together with clients to drive them forward.

Frazer Lindsay, CEO, PricewaterhouseCoopers Caribbean Region Ltd., said:

"By evolving our capabilities and who we are as a business, we can help our clients across the Caribbean region build the momentum they need to create value, build trust and face the future with optimism. PwC's updated brand identity reflects our dedication to supporting clients and our people in embracing the transformative impact of technology and other megatrends."

The Cayman Islands National Dance Company Weaves Breathtaking Tapestry of Movement

Over the Emancipation Day weekend, twenty-four company, apprentice, and guest dancers from the Cayman Islands National Dance Company graced the Harquail Theatre's stage for their thirty-seventh annual season titled MAJESTIC. Taking place over two evenings (Saturday and Sunday), the show featured almost twenty dance pieces connected by the elements: Earth, Water, Fire, Air & Spirit.

Featuring group numbers, solos and duets, remastered dances and new creations of several different dance forms, MAJESTIC was a collaborative effort, ably led by Ms. Jessica Eden, Artistic Director. "The dancers put in the time, dedication, and hard work to improve their technique and stage presence over the past year. Last weekend's performances showed their growth. That is what we aim for, for audiences to come each year and be impressed by how we have improved year after year."

In addition to showing their skilled moves, this year's show featured eight different choreographers, some creating dances for the first time. "I've been attending shows for many years and within the last few years I've seen so much growth in the company and dancers each season. Good to see new choreographers coming to the fore. It was an amazing show!" remarked one audience member.

This year's show featured three male dancers, their presence on stage bringing a much welcomed energy and vibe to the show. "Phenomenal performance yesterday! I was so impressed and brought to tears multiple times."

MAJESTIC was an extraordinary dance experience that took audiences on a mesmerizing journey through the wonders of nature, the depths of human emotions, and the profound connection between them. Unfolding in five acts inspired by elemental forces (Earth, Water, Fire, Air, Spirit), MAJESTIC celebrated the splendour of the natural world, and humanity’s intrinsic bond with it. Through stunning visuals, evocative music scores, and captivating choreography, this production inspired the audience to reflect on their place in, and connection to the world, and to renew their appreciation for the beauty we often miss in our busy lives. At the end of the weekend, audiences were left amazed at the beauty, strength, grace and variety showcased in MAJESTIC. “[My friends and I] just LOVED the show! We were talking about how Cayman has such great talent, both young and old!”

Thank You

Speed Limit Reduction on Frank Sound Road Aims to Enhance Safety for All Road Users

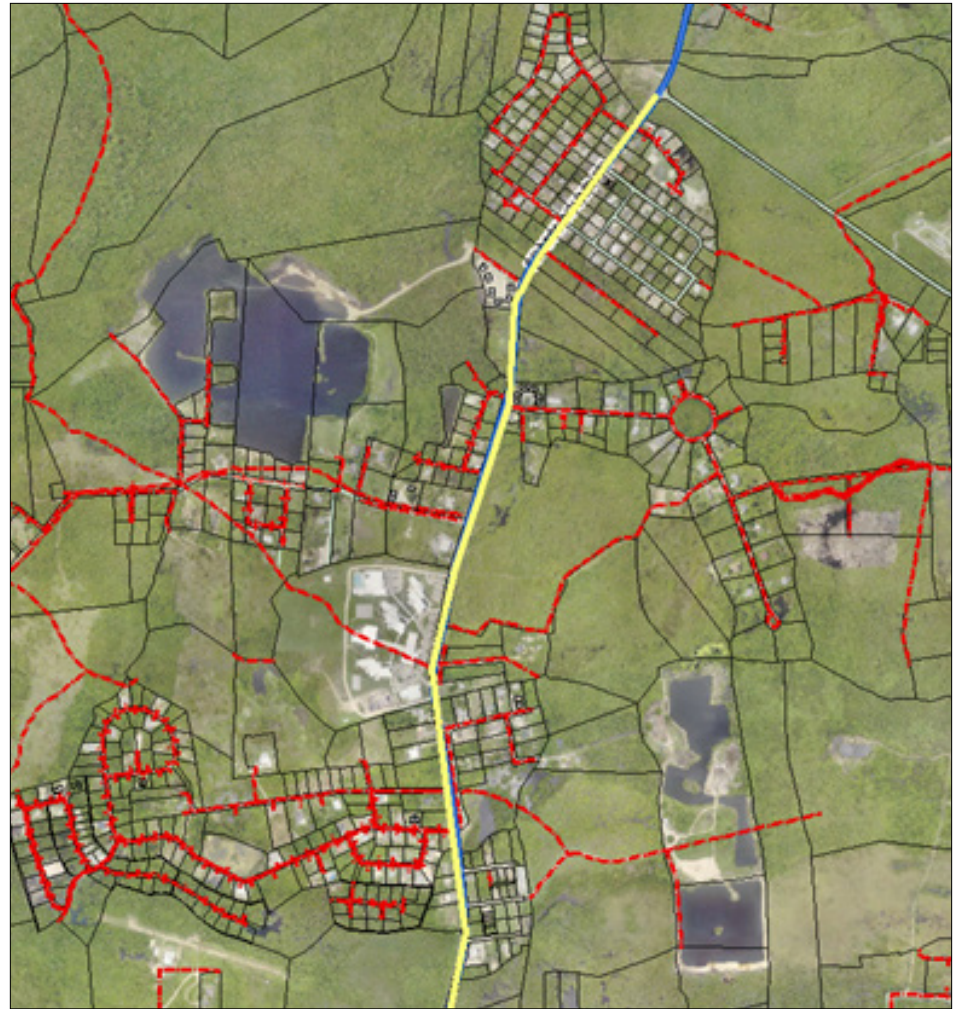

The National Roads Authority (NRA) wishes to inform the public of an important change to the speed limit on Frank Sound Road. Effective immediately, the speed limit between the junction of Bodden Town Road/ Seaview Road/ Frank Sound Road to Botanic Road has been reduced from 50MPH to 40PMH.

This adjustment comes as part of ongoing efforts to improve road safety in residential and high-traffic areas. The decision to reduce the speed limit follows a review of traffic patterns, accident data, and community feedback indicating the need for safer travel speeds along this stretch of road, which is frequently used by school buses, cyclists, and pedestrians, especially near the Botanic Park and local residences.

The updated speed limit signage will be installed on Wednesday 7th May 2025.

Motorists are advised to exercise caution whilst the signs are being updated. The NRA reminds drivers to stay alert, and adhere to the posted speed limits.

Cayman Islands to Commemorate VE-Day 80th Anniversary

By: Marsha Ebanks

The Cayman Islands will commemorate the 80th anniversary of Victory in Europe (VE)-Day at an event to be held at the Cayman Turtle Centre in West Bay on Thursday, 8 May starting 7:30 pm. Members of the public are invited to join Celebrate Cayman and the Cayman Islands Veterans Association in honouring the significant occasion.

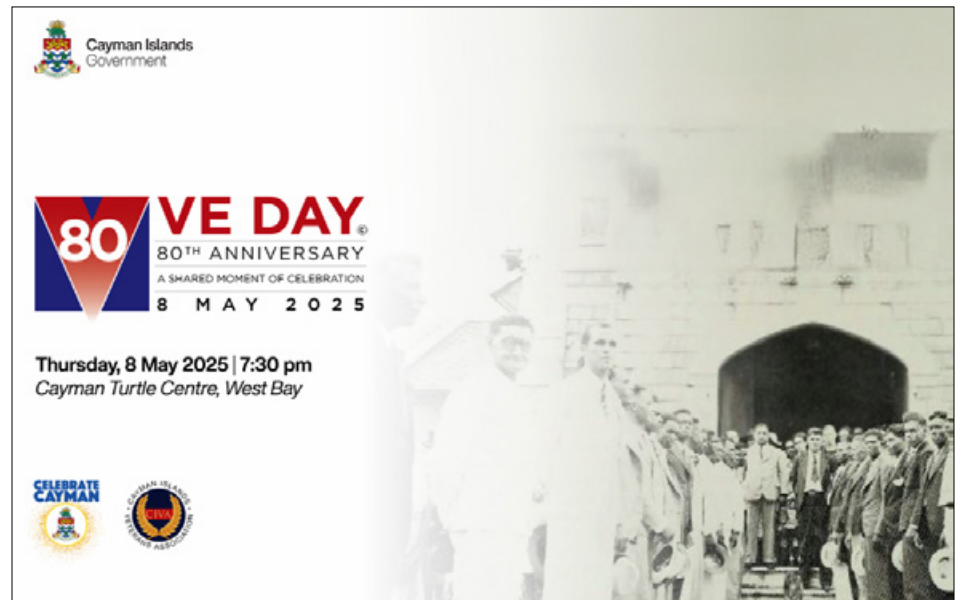

Executive Chairman of Celebrate Cayman Alfonso Wright, stated, "As we celebrate VE-Day, we not only honour the bravery of our veterans but also reflect on the values of peace and unity that this day represents. We encourage everyone to join us in this celebration of freedom and remembrance."

Governor Jane Owen, Premier Honourable André Ebanks and other government officials will participate in Thursday evening's celebration. The event will also include President of Cayman Islands Veterans Association, Andrew McLaughlin, as well as the association's members and relatives.

Cayman will join more than 200 beacon locations to remember the tens of thousands of allied forces who gave service on D-DAY eighty plus years ago to secure peace and ending of the second World War in Europe. The 80th VE-Day anniversary ceremony is a reminder of those who served during World War II from the British West Indies and particularly the Cayman Islands. During the war, a company of the Jamaica Home Guard was established on Grand Cayman in June 1942, and the men carried out their duties until the end of the campaign in 1945.

To mark this important milestone, large fires or beacons will be lit across the United Kingdom (UK), Channel Islands, Isle of Man and UK Overseas Territories. Special lamp lights of peace will also be lit on each of the five beaches in Normandy in keeping with the longstanding tradition in Britain during that time.

its signature interactive display, designed to educate students on key building concepts, construction standards, and code compliance. A favourite among students, the model offers a hands-on learning experience that takes them through the details of residential design, from the foundation to the roof. Planning staff worked together to create five Old Caymanian-style homes, reflecting the architectural heritage of the Cayman Islands. The new models are more than just educational tools, they are a celebration of the islands' design traditions and a source of inspiration for students exploring future careers. By integrating culture and construction, the Department offers a richer, more immersive experience that sparks curiosity and broadens understanding of the planning and building process. Through initiatives like these, the Department of Planning and the Ministry of PAHITD continue to empower the next generation with knowledge about building safety, sustainability, and the diverse career paths available within the construction and planning sectors. These school visits are a cornerstone of the Department's outreach strategy and a testament to its dedication to nurturing future professionals in the field. The Department of Planning under the Ministry of PAHITD look forward to expanding its impact in upcoming visits and remains committed to inspiring young minds to become the planners, builders, and designers of tomorrow.

CIFA donates
equipment to local clubs

Cayman Islands Football Association leaders recently made donations that are sure to help with the development of local football for a long time to come.

CIFA President Alfredo Whittaker, along with other members of the CIFA Executive Committee, recently donated dozens of uniforms and footballs to local clubs, underscoring CIFA's commitment to growing the game by providing the equipment.

"There is a lot that happens behind the scenes in terms of CIFA supporting the development of Cayman Islands clubs and players. This is just one example," Whittaker said. "We are happy to be able to support local football in this way and will continue to do so whenever we can."

In addition to the donations, CIFA also provided prize money for clubs for the 2023-2024 season.

"Congratulations to all the teams which, through their performances in competitions last season, earned prize money," Whittaker said.

Let's get fired up!

An authentic surge of motivation will change your life immediately. The best part of my day is seeing clients just like you achieve amazing results. Whether you drop a few sizes, lose the baby weight, get off your blood pressure meds, or shrink your waist, the excitement is always contagious. It's hard to describe that euphoria that settles in once you've achieved your fitness goal. It's one of those things that you have to experience to understand. Every single one of my clients who have achieved massive results have ONE THING IN COMMON...

They are all highly motivated.

I am in a unique position. I know how to get you (or anyone else who walks through my door) into great shape. I can coach you through a 50-pound weight loss. I can guide you to a healthier body. I can even train you into a toned athlete.

But there is one catch. You'll need to be motivated. Just saying, or even just thinking, that you want to get into great shape isn't enough. You need motivation—and that's just half of the equation. The other part (and the most important) is ACTION. Nothing happens until you take action. You can want it, think about it, mull it over, ponder it, plan it, and then re-plan it. But nothing happens until you take action. While I may not know your story—it's probably safe to assume that you want to drop fat and tone up. You want to look better, to have more energy, to experience fewer aches and pains, and to enjoy sweet satisfaction as you achieve your goals once and for all. I know that all of my successful clients were once in your shoes. They wanted to change their bodies. They felt urgency. And then they did what most fail to do. They took action and contacted me. But there is more to it than that. They then committed to a program, put in the exercise, stuck to their diet and met their goals. There's nothing more gratifying than getting back into those jeans that now sit in the back of your closet. People who take massive action get massive rewards. And those that simply talk about losing weight will continue to put weight on, pound after pound. I hate to put it that way, but it's the truth. So what do you want?

- To drop 40 pounds
- To feel younger
- To look better in your birthday suit
- To become healthier

How bad do you want it? How much motivation do you have? Enough to take
